War Garden Raid Brings
Out Boys' Fighting Spirit

The War Garden looked something like a scene of war on last Friday morning when the garden, well worked by the four veterans in charge of it, who had neatly planted various articles on the eve before, had been visited by a neighboring lad, apparently envious of his neighbor kids fine work, who laid waste the results of an afternoon's labor, making that part of the horticultural sector a veritable scene of devastation. There needed no investigation as to the identity of the juvenile culprit who no sooner had made his appearance early Friday morning was pounced upon by two of the gardeners whose patch had been affected. There was no waiting for a court of justice. With the resolution of the leaders of an angered mob did the irate youngsters go after the guilty devastator, handing him several knocks that sent him sprawling to the ground, giving the rising sun an early scene of battle to look upon. Difficult it is to tell what might have been the result had not the Principal of the school quickly appeared upon the scene, and on inquiring the cause of the conflict proceeded to gently excuse the young gardeners, however lecturing them upon the moral point of law, that hereafter they must not take the law into their own hands but to wait for the course of justice, as mob law at no time can be justifiable. The culprit having confessed his guilt promising to be good in the future, the school authorities, considering the punishment sufficient for the for the misdemeanor, left the
