SAVE SUGAR FOR CANNING.

Stores are now required to limit their retail sales of sugar for daily use to two pounds in cities and five pounds to rural customers. The limit is still three pounds per month per person but loyal people are urged to reduce this amount. This restriction on sales is to supply the needed sugar for canning and preserving and any housewife may secure the needed supply for that purpose by signing a certificate affirming to the Government that she will not use any of the sugar so purchased for any other purpose than canning or preserving. Such, in substance, is the statement of Federal Food Administrator W. B. Aver of Portland.

There is plenty of sugar in the sugar countries and plenty of refineries in this country but the connecting link, the needed ships, are not available, so if you would not face a shortage of canned and preserved fruits next winter, save sugar now.

LEMONADE STANDS TABOO ON JULY FOURTH.

If you wish to be patriotic on the Fourth of July this year, don't drink lemonade or other sweetened drinks, or eat candy. This new way of celebrating the national holiday is suggested by the Food Administration, which is making an urgent appeal, just now, for the saving of sugar in all possible ways to make up for the sugar losses resulting from submarine sinkings and to help build up the necessary reserve for domestic and factory canning.

In order to save the sugar that would otherwise be consumed at picnics and celebrations on July 4 through the medium of lemonade, orangeade, etc., the Food Administration has decided to refuse all permits for sugar to be used for such purposes on that day.

"Hundreds of men and boys are applying for such permits," said Assistant Federal Food Administrator W. K. Newell in making the announcement, "and if sugar permits were given to all these, the sugar consumed in lemonade and other sweetened drinks would, in the aggregate, be very substantial. We have very impressive evidence of the urgent need of saving sugar every possible way in our new restriction which limits the sale of sugar to two pounds at a time to the consumer, and it would certainly be an absurdity, in the face of this restriction, to permit the use of hundreds of pounds of sugar in lemonades sold at picnics and other celebrations on the day of all days when we should be patriotic in every word, thought and deed. The Food Administration will prevent this unwarranted use of sugar by refusing permits to those applying for them, and the men and boys who had planned to make a little extra money by keeping lemonade stands on the national holiday should cheerfully give up or change their plans, feeling that they are being patriotic in so doing. A new way for everyone to be patriotic this Fourth of July will be to refrain from drinking lemonades, eating candies, or otherwise consuming the sugar so badly needed for export to our armies and our allies overseas."

MIGHT BE HEEDED HERE.

The Washington state Fuel Administration has served notice on household and industrial consumers that neglect to order fuel now may result in their being cut off from supplies later. The notice reads:

"In case there is a coal shortage next winter, the consumer who has storage space, or who could have provided for storage for his coal and who did not, will not be supplied until all booked orders have been filled, and then he will be obliged to take his chances."

In this connection Fuel Administrator Holmes of Oregon does not desire to make the same order unless compelled to do so. He points out, however, that there are many people without means of fuel storage and some without money sufficient to order ahead, and that their needs must be met if possible. To this end he is of the opinion that the "fuel slacker"—that is, one who can buy and who does not, in the summer time—should not feel put out if such order is put into effect when cold weather sets in.

Open no cans. Eat fresh vegetables and other perishables. This is the request made of all loyal Americans by the Food Administration, which points out in a recent bulletin that both labor and metal are scarce and that every time a housewife opens a tin can unnecessarily she is depleting the National food reserve. To replace the can of fruit or vegetables so opened will cost much more than did the one opened. In addition to this, there will be some available perishable food unused when canned goods are opened.

Don't open cans. Help build up the national food reserve and shorten the war.

Our boys in the trenches and the toiling, privation-worn people of the allied countries are depending upon us for food, not only now but until after the war is won. To take care of this essential war service demand we must build up an enormous food reserve that will carry us over any shortages occasioned by bad weather, accidents or other misfortune. Think twice before drawing upon this reserve, and use fresh fruits and vegetables while in season, instead of canned foods or foods that will keep. Guard the food reserve, and help build it up!

Fuel ordered in summer time, saves men and hours in woods and mine.

Keep on eating potatoes until the old ones are gone. They won't keep and the new ones will.
