"KNOWN FOR TONE"

What Stradivari, the master violin maker, did for the violin has been achieved again in this wonderful instrument

The STRADIVARA Sound Board

The thin, edge-grained spruce Sound Board, extending the full width and depth of the cabinet like the sound board of a piano, is responsible for the marvelous tone-qualities of the music that is produced so beautifully by the Stradivara.

Human voice, violin, cello, piano, wind and reed instrument are all rendered by the Stradivara with sweetness and naturalness unequalled. There is a remarkable absence of metallic noise. The Sound Board transmits nothing but the pure music of the record.

Plays All Records With True
Reproduction of Original Tone

A simple turn of the Stradivara Universal Tone Arm and the substitution of a different needle changes the playing from one kind of record to another. With the Stradivara you have an unlimited choice of artist or selection.

HEDGE BUILDING - BEAVERTON

Mrs. Sam Road left Beaverton on Saturday afternoon and Sam says he learned of her intention only at 10 o'clock that night when he went home from the restaurant and found that she had gone. He says that he hates to leave Beaverton but that he cannot run the restaurant alone and so he has sold it. Mr. and Mrs. Road were married last August. It was her second marriage. Her sister recently came here from Sacramento and the two women left together and consequently he thinks the sister had something to do with her leaving. He says they got along well except that once just before Christmas he found that she was holding out money from sales and that he objected. Sam will pay up all bills and expects to leave some time next week, but may return later. He was in California for two weeks recently and thinks that happenings during his absence may have influenced his wife to leave as she had not intimated to him that she was dissatisfied or contemplated leaving.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

Few women give much worry to the problem of dressing in style or dressing in a manner that would be really becoming.

The price of beef has declined slightly. In fact, ever so slightly. There are a few rising young men in this world, but the majority keep their seats in a crowded straitcar. You can't tell what a boy learns at college by the amount it costs his father.

The man who thinks he knows it all is an easy mark for a designing woman.

THESE ARE THE
The one who got around a system by which we can produce a lot of food without having first produced it. If we all decide to produce food, we all starve. Divinely simple, isn't it?

A New Jersey farmer asks why should a producer of food be compelled to work eighty-four hours a week to feed another who works but forty-two at much higher pay.

He suggests that if all farmers will agree to cut their acreage to one-fifth, they'll only have to work six hours, and they'll get five times as much for their produce.

But if the farmers produced only one-fifth the usual amount of food, there wouldn't be enough to go around.

And if the farmers were paid on a six hour basis with double pay for overtime, and the same thing applied to distributors, all the consumers could do would be to farm a union and refuse to eat.

But a man must eat. Wherefore someone must labor as long as necessary to produce the required amount of food.

If one hundred men on an island agree to share and share alike, each man's income is just one one-hundredth of what they all produce. None of them can work less without cutting down his own resources. Of course, the time would come, as someone has very aptly pointed out, when those who were fittest of foot and could alone catch the wild geese upon which the hundred lived, would demand more recompense and undoubtedly get it.

The farmer is now in the position of the fleet-footed geese chaser. He must not be irritated into striking for more pay and less work. But he could not be blamed for following example set on every side.

It is all very sad, but the plain truth is that we are approaching a point where our national production may be eclipsed by our national payroll. That would mean bankruptcy. Then it will be, work or starve.

In the days of the Garden of Eden, the situation would have been met by Adam and Eve agreeing to eat less and hunt more. If anyone can think of a better solution he has yet to offer it.—The Manufacturer.

Welcome 1920! While 1919 broke the record for wonderful things accomplished in closing the great world war, we hope that you will be able to accomplish even greater things by assuring permanent peace to the whole world.
