BACK ON THE JOB AGAIN

George A. White is back on the job as Adjutant General of Oregon. The people of Oregon are lucky, indeed, to have him there. White has been one of the most painstaking, conscientious and efficient officials. Oregon has ever had and wherever he has made an effort success has followed. Oregon was first in every step of military preparation while White was at the head of the State militia and when that work was done he did not rest on his laurels and let the boys go overseas and shift for themselves. He accepted a small appointment in the army field, rather than a cushy job as Brigadier General at home, and won his stripes on General Pershing's staff during the hard and grilling days of the hardest fighting.

Then he organized and put over the American Legion, doing more, perhaps than any other man connected with the movement to make it a successful organization. His newspaper experience (he was for years a reporter and later an editor of the Oregonian) had shown him the need and taught him how to provide the necessary publicity and the American Weekly forged steadily ahead toward a successful career. Every magazine had its dark days and the American Weekly passed through them, perhaps has more to pass through, but the start that White gave it in a few short months made its problems far easier than those of most publications. Yet not a word of self-praise filtered through its columns.

White has made good in a difficult profession. He has served with honor through three wars (if the expedition to the Mexican Border may be called a war) and each time at a large personal sacrifice and he has shown himself to be one of the men of largest executive and administrative capacity in Oregon's public life today.

Oregon is indeed fortunate to have such a man in a position where graft and mismanagement have too often made themselves manifest in the past, and particularly at a time when the sentiment following in the wake of the war would make these things doubly easy.

ANOTHER SIDE TO IT

Mayor Baker and County Clerk Beveridge, of Portland, are heading their employees in the "back to the denim" assault on the high cost of living and overalls, khaki suits and work shirts are to be the popular thing in office and street wear. It all sounds very nice and will make a great showing for the newest crusade. No doubt it will have its effect and will take a toll where it is least needed by penalizing the helpless retailer for the sins of the manufacturer, the jobber and the wholesaler, who have already got theirs.

But there is another side to the question. Overalls, khaki and heavy blue shirts have long been the garb of the workman. With a doubled demand for these garments, the price will take the same skyward tendency that other clothing has shown. Where will this be felt? Undoubtedly in the homes of those of lowest incomes, who already have all the burdens they can bear. Will this weapon against the old H. C. L. prove a boomerang?

The total investment in buildings at the University of Oregon since it was founded in 1872 has been $562,947. This sum includes even additions and major repairs throughout the 48 years. The cost of Lincoln high school in Portland was $514,293. The entire building plant of the State University in 48 years has thus cost less than $50,000 more than a single city high school. The need for more buildings at the University is well-nigh desperate.

Applications for admittance next fall to the Oregon Agricultural College and the University of Oregon have already come in, on the principle that it pays to be an early bird. These early comers evidently are afraid of being crowded out in case the higher educational relief bill does not pass on May 21.

AS IT SEEMS TO ME

H. E.

That the green sod growing on many of our house tops would make a good foundation for a roof garden.

That nearly always when you hear the lusty wail of a boy with energy plus filling the air, you can look in at the window and find a woman's hand at the seat of his trouble.

That the sweet little 6 year old tot, passing our window every day, with a handful of pencils is surely making her mark in the world.

That if you're in a corner, and your hopes begin to fail, it seems a losing fight. Think a bit of Jonah in the body of the whale.

'Cause he got out all right.

That if a man's mind is a blank during sleep, it must be difficult for some men to tell when they are awake.

When a man has a bee in his bonnet, he is always reasonably sure of a lively hood.

That it's a good thing for humanity that a baby can't say what it thinks when cutting teeth.

That if the world's a stage, then most of us are only stage hands.

That the only people who can believe everything they hear are the stone deaf.

That the country needs more hogs declared an agricultural editor. The brother should have been more specific. He should have indicated the particular line in which the hogs are needed. As we see it, in sugar, woolens, etc., the hog market is considerably overcrowded.

That Howard Boyd signed the pledge. Someday says that they saw him refuse a root beer in Young's the other day. Now see what National Prohibition has gone and done for us.

Sympathy is a safe and sane cure for many of the world's ills when taken inwardly. If rubbed on it is found to be volatile and quickly vanishes. Plant it deep.

That all men are equal before the law, but not before the mother-in-law.

That the average husband will roar like a bull if his wife spend $20 for a hat and also he will be ashamed to be seen with her if she doesn't.

That it pays to be a Booster. Everybody Boost. Begins to look as though Beaverton was going to do things. And why not? We are one of the most energetic and richest little burgs in all Oregon. No matter what we set out to do—check this down in your memo book—we're going to do it. Get out your curry-combs, fellow citizens, and begin to rake moss. Our future prosperity rests with you.

The State University Agricultural College and the State Normal

have for many years spent less money per student per year in training Oregon boys and girls than is spent at any other institution. The present cost at the State University is $208 a year; at the College, it is $180. But even before the war, when money would buy twice as much as it buys now, the average cost of all other state institutions was $325 a year. In addition

Their Building Investment is also very low

At the State University it is at present $322 per student; at the College, $300. But in state institutions elsewhere, statistics show the average to be $895. These are convincing proofs of economical administration, but the three institutions can no longer give satisfactory training to the vast number of Oregon boys and girls (5400 in fulltime courses alone), unless they receive more support. On May 21 the Higher Educational Relief measure will appear on the ballot. You are urged to preserve the quality of higher education by voting for it.

Free! Two Dollars! Free!

If it is true that $2.00 saved is $2.00 made, you can make $2.00 very easy, just by stepping into our store and buying one of these Pyrene Fire Extinguishers for $8.50 that cost you $10.50 in Portland or anywhere else in the world. We have just a few left which we will sell at this remarkable low price, until they are all gone.

We have lots of other Bargains Just as Good, but Paper is so scarce and Labor so high that it costs too much to enumerate on paper all the bargains we give.

You are invited to make our store your home when you are in town.

UNDERWEAR GOING UP

A trade journal reports that underwear will be one-third higher next summer. Geographically speaking, it could not be expected to go any lower.

Next summer they say the garments you are wearing will cost a great deal more than they now do. To buy them right now you must be preparing, or pay the advance which is up to you.

Your clothing outside which always is showing with the old time price you cannot compare. The garments beneath still upwards are going. That next to your skin, they call underwear.

Though higher in price what about the making. Will they be shorter or will they be small.

What a small bundle home you will be taking. No legs or sleeves are in them at all. I s'pose they will make some of them more porous. Making the hole larger in each B. V. D.

Higher and higher the fact is before us. Sewing on goods below elbow and knee. Thinner and thinner some goods they are wearing. So they can sell them to customers cheap.

And in that manner are somewhat deceiving. In clothes that you wear and food that you eat. Here's to summer when the sun is shining. For light underwear we go to the store. To purchase them then we will be declining. If they're too high, we'll wear them no more.

O. O. SMITH

A. E. Westcott, of Banks, was in town Wednesday looking after his political fences. Mr. Westcott is seeking the Republican nomination for State Representative, and has as his slogan: "A Sound Business Representation for All Interests of Washington County." His announcement appears in our political column this week. Mr. Westcott is a man well qualified to represent this fine big county. He is a good business man and farmer, successfully conducting a splendid dairy ranch in the north part of the county. He has had wide experience on various boards, and was president of the Washington County Fair. There are three members of the lower house to be elected from this county and there are four candidates seeking the favor of the people. Besides Mr. Westcott, Hon. L. M. Graham, at present a member of the legislature, and a man who was instrumental in carrying out some of the best road legislation in the history of the State, Earl E. Fisher, of Beaverton, a man of fine ability, who is a successful teacher and a good business man as well, proposes to put up a fight against the school book and paving trusts if elected to office. The fourth man is a gentleman residing down in the southeast part of the county. —Forest Grove News-Times
