something more; and so we go on—never very happy, never quite satisfied.

There is a lesson here for those of us who are wise enough to learn it. Happiness and cheeriness are so very much more a state of mind than a result of outward circumstances. If we determined to be happy with what we have now, we might be ready to be still happier with whatever good thing Fate has in store for us. But once get out of the habit of being happy and cheery, and it is very difficult to develop it again.

TRUE FRATERNITY

Among the many rebirths that have been coming in American life in recent years has been the large number of fraternal societies. I have watched my country with sort of a loving and on-looking eye for many years and I have wondered what was the real soul of America. Had it a soul? And what was that soul? I saw the buying and selling, I saw the greed for gain. I saw the mad pursuit for money, for honor, for glory, renown, and I have wondered had it a soul. But among the great ordinary common masses of the people, to which, thank God I belong, I found that there was an unrest calling for something—something more than politics and statecraft and business gain, and I found fraternal institutions springing up here and there over America, not seeking the mere pleasure of a fraternity but wanting to know what they might do in the way of betterment of mankind. The age of inspiration has not passed. The soul of America was seeking for the real thing in American life. Fraternity, faith, friendship, family ties, family insurance, and the banding together in one great body for loving service.—Vice President Thomas R. Marshall.

A SILLY VERY SENSIBLE POEM

It was midnight on the ocean
Not a street car was in sight,
The sun was shining brightly,
And it rained all the night.

It was winter day in summer,
The sky was raining glass,
A barefoot boy with shoes on,
Stood sitting on the grass.

It was evening and the rising sun,
Was setting in the West,
The little fishes in the trees,
Were cuddled in their nest.

A FUTURE POLICY FOR THE TIMES

Events which have happened within the past few weeks have given rise to considerable speculation regarding the future of the Times, and, owing to the fact that the publisher of the Times was incapacitated at the time and was thus unable to explain to the interested parties just the significance of the happenings, we take this means of announcing fully our intentions for the future.

As most of our readers already know, the publisher of the Times early this year purchased an interest in the Forest Grove News-Times, thus providing the best of facilities for the printing of the paper. Since early in February we have been making daily trips between Beaverton and Forest Grove and we believe that every reader of the Times, who will take the trouble to compare an issue of this date with the present issue of the paper, will agree that the new arrangement has meant a decided improvement in the paper.

Hence, when we received notice three weeks ago to vacate the house in which we have lived since coming to Beaverton and were unable to find another house in Beaverton which could be rented, there was nothing to do but accept one which was offered in Forest Grove. And while we live there for the present, we will in no wise lose interest in Beaverton and will spend fully as much time here as formerly.

In addition to the present facilities for making the Times a truly representative paper of Beaverton and vicinity, we will maintain an office here with Mr. Carruth, who will attend to all matters of subscriptions, advertising and news which you may wish to leave for us and with the completion of the present school year we will be able to announce the association with this paper of an O. A. C. graduate in industrial journalism.

In short, the publisher of the Times stands as ready today as in the past to make the Times just as good a paper as you want it to be. And this applies to every reader as well as to the advertisers. If you have news for the paper, send it in. Don't worry if you may not be able to write it just as you think it ought to be. Send it anyway. We have had twenty years' experience trying to make things sound right. If you have a neighbor who doesn't take the Times, send us his name. We will send him a copy of the paper and nine times out of ten he will subscribe. And when you have something to sell or want to buy something, remember that the little reader ads in the Times do a lot of time-saving for you.

Speak a good word for us and we will reciprocate. Your interests are our interests and it is our ambition to make the Times not only the best paper in Washington County, but the best country paper in Oregon.

LOCAL NEWS
Lots of Town Happenings Told
In Brief Form.

Miss Ruth Cady is home from Turner, Ore., where she was a teacher in the high school.

R. S. Guppy has added an attractive new fence to his property, greatly enhancing its appearance.

Union Services will be held at the Congregational church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

The old Huber saloon building, now occupied by the Scholls Telephone Company, has recently been painted and now presents a much more sightly appearance.

A Rossi has cleared away the debris left when the old 1908 saloon building was torn down and the corner now presents a very attractive and inviting appearance—probably inviting enough to cause a new structure to arise there in the near future.

We thoroughly agree with G. W. Stitt that the county practiced poor economy in providing uncomfortable quarters for the primary elections. It was difficult to get judges and clerks to serve and the illness which followed the exposure in the unsuitable buildings will make them harder than ever to secure in November. If a better showing isn't made in November, we're apt to scratch the ticket.

There was a happy reunion at the pleasant suburban farm home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Alexander of West Beaverton, last week, when her two brothers, E. H. Hammer, of Minneapolis, and E. Hammer, of New York, surprised her after being separated for 18 years. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hammer left Tuesday for Seattle on return trip and E. Hammer leaves Saturday for San Francisco and expects to spend the summer at other points of interest in California. Sunday a trip was enjoyed on the highway. Lunch was served at Eagle Creek and needless to say enjoyed by all in spite of a refreshing shower just as everything was completed for the "feed." They were all delighted with our Oregon scenery and promised to come again. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander will regret their departure very much, as things have been rather lively on the ranch the past two weeks.

ARE WE ALL SO?

How curious it is that we human beings are always longing for something that we have not got, and finding, when later on we perhaps get that particular thing, that it does not bring us half so much happiness as we had expected.

Then we at once begin to long for

That on election day for a polling place "any old hole" seems to have been held good enough.

That it's twin sixes for the rich man. Six twines for the poor man.

That it takes more than a glad hand to hold business nowadays.

That it is not the best fighter, but the best runner that wins the political battle.

That a misplaced switch is apt to wreck a woman's train of thought.

That the golden eagle like other good ten-ers, is a rare bird.

That our friend Sam has won as Secty. of State, and that there was no nigger in the "Wood"-pile—as we predicted.

That we have a sneaking suspicion that Bryan will run again this year, and it might be the best thing that could happen, for we always had good times right after he ran. We've got to change our luck some way or other.

That rag-pickers in New York are paid 33 bucks a week, school teachers draw 20. And they say education pays.

That in the algebra of love, one and one makes one.

That the average man will deride high-heeled shoes, and silk stockings, and square-necked waists, and then the son of a sailor will twist his neck off admiring those who are decked out in these things, and will never notice a woman sensibly dressed. Not that women care to be stared at, but certainly they do not care to be overlooked, to be taken as part of the landscape, like a stolid stump or something.

That in a mirror a man sees his necktie; a woman her years.

That a furnace fire is just like a man—it goes out when you want it to stay in, and it insists on staying in when you'd just as soon it would go out.

That there are thousands of men who never spoke a cuss word to their wives. They are old bachelors, of course.

That the divorce judge, like a poor marksman, makes a good many misses.

That astronomers having discovered a water vapor in the atmosphere of Mars is possibly a sign that Mars is going dry.

That it is a waste of time and money to advertise for lost friendship.

That a man is a thief when he hooks his wife's dress.
