BOXER, FAMOUS P. U. SPIRIT, AGAIN WHOLE

Many times in the history of Pacific University great excitement has been caused by the appearance of

Boxer, but it has been long since such enthusiasm was manifested by a class, as was shown three week ago Monday night (the week before vacation) and the day following when the Sophomores fought for, hunted and won all three parts of the famous emblem of P. U.'s spirit.

It did not happen altogether accidentally as some have thought. Others besides Sophs saw Boxer when he was displayed at Herrick Hall, but Sophs alone pursued and Tuesday morning that class was the only one represented in the search for the head and tail.

After showing Boxer several times on the campus the three Senior boys in charge took him over to Brown's. Al Snyder and Red Sheeley, on seeing an automobile stop in front of the house, thought it might be that containing Boxer and his guards, so followed at once.

No one was in the car when the boys came up, but the engine was going, so they stopped it, took out the key, and hid behind the car to await the return of the upper classmen, who were in the house. When the latter did return they were surprised by the attack of the two from behind the car. Red seized Boxer's body and ran with it, while Albert kept the other from following.

One of the Seniors supporting the house to be surrounded ran back inside to hide the head and tail. Other Sophs were soon summoned, but the Seniors did not stay long.

Albert Snyder and Lee Marsh guarded the house all night armed with flashlights, while one or more Seniors, up till two o'clock passed just to see what was happening. This curiosity on their part was further proof to the Sophs that the head and tail were inside as was thought, but not known.

At 7:30 the next morning the search began, and Boxer's head was found in the flour bin before 8 o'clock. The most of the rooms were thoroughly gone over several times and a guard of Sophs kept at the house all morning the tail was not discovered. About 4 o'clock a new plan was decided upon and resorting to strategy (?) one of the Sophs presented himself at the Brown home, declaring himself a Senior and was thus given the third part of Boxer, his tail.

So it happened that the class of 23 now has Boxer—but the story does not end there.

Tuesday night Boxer was successfully displayed at Herrick and many attempted pursuit, but by a trick were led in another direction and the Sophs made good their flight.

On Thursday night during the vacation seven Sophs with Boxer made a fifteen minute call at the Herrick dining room. From there they went to Shearer's and Allen's confectioneries and later to Portland.

Ralph Walker was summoned with his car from the city early in the evening and he took six other members of the class with him. The event at Portland was an Alumni banquet and Boxer was received with enthusiasm by the former students.

Harold Suller made a short speech telling how the Sophs won Boxer and what it means to the class.

Sunday afternoon twelve members of the class took Boxer not far from town and as several cameras were present a number of pictures were taken.

The Sophs intend to guard well the valuable Dog with his wealth of traditions of old P. U., yet they assure us the opportunity of unexpected glimpses of the Spirit which has fallen into their keeping.—College Index.

STOKER NO LONGER NEEDED

Use of Oil Instead of Coal Has Rendered Picturesque Character on Shipboard Unnecessary.

"The passing of the fiery furnace" might some day appear in the title of a book telling of modern methods of traveling by sea, with emphasis on the bunkering of ships with fuel oil instead of coal, thus eliminating the stoker who, day and night, shovels that coal into the ever-sizzling depths of flame. Doubtless those travelers who used to feel sorry for the stoker's plight will join in the pleasures of the trip with greater equanimity on the oil-burning boats. One of the most interesting of recent sights in the kaleidoscopic harbor of New York was the bunkering with fuel oil of the Cunard liner Aquitania directly from an oil tanker. In about twenty hours 45,000 barrels of oil was stored, by means of an 8 1/2-inch flexible metal hose, the services of but three men being required. Had all four connections been used, the bunkering could have been completed in six hours by seven men, this including both processes of discharging and receiving.

Thus the modern method means a saving of time, labor and expense, since the coal bunkering of an ocean liner usually requires the services of many men for several days. It is also interesting to note that the liner's first run with oil as a fuel resulted in the consumption of approximately 5,900 tons, as against the usual 3,840 tons of coal.—Christian Science Monitor.

MOSTLY OF INDIAN ORIGIN

Twenty-Five of the Forty-Eight States of the Country Have Practically Native Names.

Of our 48 states we find that 23 bear names of Indian origin, while 12 are English, six Spanish and three French. Two states may be said to have American names. The first is Washington, named after the Father of our Country, and the second Indiana, so called on account of the purchase and subsequent settlement by various Indian tribes of large tracts of land north of the Ohio river and within the present boundaries of the state.

When we review Indian state names, we must remember that there was no one Indian tongue. Instead, there were several separate and distinct languages, and each of these was divided into many dialects. Hence the wide variance in Indian names in different sections.

Wisconsin, written by early French explorers of the region as Ouisconsin and named for its chief stream, is thought to have come from a Sac Indian word translated as Wild Rushing Channel, and also as having reference to holes in the banks of streams where birds nest. However, neither of these interpretations can be confirmed.—National Geographic Magazine.

Artificial Wool.

The artificial wool which has been under test at Leeds (Eng.) university is produced from cotton waste, its basis being cellulose acetate. It is claimed that the product is an even better insulator against heat and cold than wool, that it takes dye successfully, and that it will wear well. In the experiments made, it has been satisfactorily converted into fabrics. Equal parts of artificial wool and natural wool gave a cloth resembling tweed, and the head of the university's textile department has suggested that this should be useful for men or women fancying homespun effects in clothing. Cheapness and possible wearing qualities constitute the special appeal of the material. Its defects are said to include inelasticity and liability to break, and these unfit it for yarns of the worsted type, requiring a combing length of two inches or more, though it may serve well for yarn and cloth where short fibers are suitable.

How He Learned.

"You're a very careful driver."
"Yes, ma'am. When I learned to drive there were always three women in the back seat telling me what to do."

In the "O" Zone.

"What is your age?"
"Twenty-two summers, judge."
"You must have been living in a cold climate."—Cartoons Magazine.

The Net Result.

"When you started this drive for such a large amount, did you succeed in raising anything?"
"Sure; I raised Cain."

Not Liberally.

"The defendant says he donated his time and talents to the candidate's campaign without pay or hope of reward."
"And what did the prosecuting attorney say to that?"
"He asked the gentlemen of the jury in sarcastic tones if they could conceive of the defendant giving anything so valuable and getting nothing in return but a slap on the back."

Force of Practice.

"I noticed how easily the moving picture actress complied with all the registration requirements when she applied for a vote."
"That's nothing to be surprised at. It ought to come easy to a movie actress to register."

Feminine Determination.

"I forbid any further extravagance in this house-furnishing business. I want you to understand, madam, that I put my foot down on any new carpets."
"All right, John, dear; they'll be there to put it down on."

Slight Mistake.

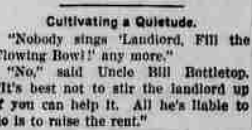

Enthusiastic Musician—Oh, come over here and listen to these magnificent records of selections from Wagner.
Record Salesman—Beg pardon, miss, but their records is "Sounds in a Fog."

Explanation.

"Campaign contributions," remarked the willing worker, "are always subject to explanations. If you get 'em you've got to explain how and if you don't get 'em you've got to explain why."

Cultivating a Quietude.

"Nobody sings 'Landlord, Fill the Flowing Bowl' any more."
"No," said Uncle Bill Bottletop. "It's best not to stir the landlord up if you can help it. All he's liable to do is to raise the rent."

GENERAL APPEARANCE

"How do you tell a suffragette?"
"By her husband."

Avoiding Danger.

Oh, bring the duncap out anew, since crime affects to be reined; if thus attired I go on view, I can't be called "a master mind."

Queer Proceeding.

"Boddies has a very paradoxical way of conducting his business."
"How so?"

"He is continually extending his contracting operations."

A Rerly.

"What is a woman of tact, anyway?" asked the Old Foggy.
"One who knows how to smile when you praise some other woman," replied the Grouch.

The Genial Host.

"Was it a joy ride?"
"For everybody but me," answered Mr. Chuggins. "I was buying the gasoline and conducting the interviews with the poles."

Moving an Audience.

"A successful speech carries the audience right along with it."
"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But at the new rates of transportation I doubt whether we can afford it."

At the Club.

"How far have you proceeded in your discussion of intimate domestic problems?"
"We have just gone through the trousers pocket matter."

MODERN CRANK CASE SERVICE

"The average motorist," said Mr. J. E. Balseley, District Sales Manager of the Standard Oil Company, today, "knows that he should have his crankcase cleaned every so often, but he doesn't know exactly why. It's not the most pleasant job, and he lets it go, usually, as long as he can. After all, the reasons for keeping an automobile crankcase clean are simple, and mighty convincing.

"Lubricating systems of automobiles are almost universally of the circulating type. The amount of oil pumped always exceeds the actual amount required for lubrication of bearing surfaces. The surplus flows back to the main reservoir to be again circulated by the pump. As the oil circulates, and as it rests in the crankcase, it becomes contaminated by fuel that works past the pistons, by carbon that forms on and falls from the under side of the piston heads, by road dust that is sucked in through the breather pipe, by water, a product of combustion, which may work past the pistons and mix with the oil and metallic particles which are the result of the wear and tear of operation. With the first movement of the engine the process of oil contamination begins and it increases as operation continues until the oil becomes charged with dirt and loses its lubrication value.

"To keep the engine running at its best, change the oil in the crankcase as often as the manufacturer's instruction book says it should be changed. However, it is not sufficient to simply drain out the old oil, for that leaves deposits of dirt and badly contaminated oil in the crankcase to impair immediately the efficiency of the new supply of oil when it is poured into the crankcase. The whole operation must be most thorough.

"Cleaning the crankcase is a troublesome job to the average motorist. For this reason regular cleaning of the crankcase was often neglected.

"To remedy this condition and to add to the efficiency and life of automobile engines, the Standard Oil Company is sponsoring a new crankcase cleaning service, co-operating with high class garages throughout the Pacific Coast. This new service is indicated on the sign that identifies garages where this service is to be had—Modern Crank Case Cleaning Service. The service is simple, but according to our lubrication experts it is most thorough and exceedingly efficient. Just three operations are necessary to give this service: drain off the old, diluted oil, flush out the crankcase with Calo! Flushing Oil, and refill the crankcase with fresh oil of the correct grade for the engine. It's a while-you-wait service, too.

"Modern Crank Case Cleaning Service is a new step toward keeping engines fit for steady service; it means, obviously, better engine performance and longer engine life.
