ABOUT THE MOST FOOLISH THING PEOPLE can do is to kick about the weather. There may be a little more reason for kicking about your clothes or your food or the way you sleep for there is every reason to think that you may be able to change such condition.

NEVER was the necessary and value of the canning industry realized more keenly by the farmers than this season.

THE CANNERS are the stabilizers of the farming industry as they absorb the surplus crops and make a steady market for practically every thing the farmer grows.

FARMERS are beginning to realize that good average prices and an assured market for their crops are better than high prices one year and no market the next.

CO-OPERATION between farmer and cannery will work wonders for both.

WHAT WONDERS! Since February, 1919, nearly 100,000,000 gallons of gasoline have been used in motor vehicles in Oregon. At 23 cents a gallon, the money spent in purchase of these millions of gallons would total $23,000,000. In the period, $1,198,933 has come into the state treasury in the form of taxes on this gasoline consumption. In addition, $3,756,986 gallons of distillate have been used in tractors, trucks and other types of motor vehicles.

SUICIDE REPORT OF BANKS BOY DENIED

David Mansfield, of Banks, returned last week from Aberdeen, Wash., where his son, Clyde Mansfield, disabled veteran of the 243d Canadian engineers, died, supposedly from drinking wood alcohol.

Mr. Mansfield does not believe his son had any suicidal intent or was discouraged with life. On the contrary, he says, his son was looking forward with pleasure to a visit this week from a younger brother, of whom he was very fond. He also says that his son's widow denies having made a statement that her husband had talked of suicide. He suffered at times from stomach pains and she thinks he drank some of the alcohol, believing it would stop the pain.

When things don't move very fast, take a lesson from that bird of the Oregon forests, the woodpecker. He pecks, pecks and keeps pecking. The woodpecker is of value, of economic value, in account of the unceasing battle he wages against a serious timber pest, the pine-bark beetle.

TIMES GETS LETTER FROM CONSTANTINOPLE

The Times has been promised a number of letters from the "Near East" situation by an Oregon man now in the field, of which the following is one:

Constantinople, July 28, 1921. Editor Times:

I am writing this from the home of Rev. J. P. McNaughton, in a suburb of Constantinople. Dr. McNaughton will be remembered by many as the first speaker who came to Oregon for the Near East Relief.

He was principal of the school at Bardesag, where he had several hundred boys. In his home is Miss Margaret Hiaman, from Forest Grove, who is waiting the stabilizing of conditions in the interior from which she was recently driven by a Kemalistic governor. Mrs. Burt, of Bend, is in charge of two of our personnel houses in Constantinople. She has promised me a message to her Oregon friends on my return from the Caucasus about August 15th.

REFUGEE CAMP IN THE CITY OF CONSTANTINOPLE

My first refugee camp seen in the city of Constantinople impressed the nearness of war, for the relief workers are exporting 2000 refugees soon as a result of the Greek offensive.

These they must stow away somewhere. This particular camp has a capacity of 500, but 1100 were already there and 3000 are coming. It is hard on the eyes and throat to see babies, half starved, fed on Oregon bread and milk bought with Oregon money.

Nothing is given an able bodied man no matter how needy or deserving or unable he may be to find work. There are too many women and children to be fed.

The writer is coming seems to be a terror in the hearts of our relief workers. I just talked with Maynard from the Caucasus and he says that last winter they never had heat in the orphanages and only part of the time did they have fuel for cooking.

I saw my first starvation cases at Iamit, two kiddies, brother and sister. No more for me, thank you, though I know we shall see many such sights next week in the Caucasus. I do not think I can ever use those words lightly after this.

REGIONS OF THE CAUCASUS

I think I can stand the sight of the older orphans, both boys and girls, but I wish they wouldn't have so many pathetic little chaps of three and four. Of course, Constantinople is not the worst. Everyone tells us to wait for the Caucasus, for there we will see the results of war at wholesale.

As we are taking 7000 tons of supplies with us from Constantinople we dropped down the gulf of Iamit 50 miles to Derindje where our warehouses are located, to take flour, beans, rice, clothing, knitting machines and other supplies, enough for a month for the Caucasus.

Down the gulf from Derindje is Iamit and across the gulf is Bardesag. Two hundred and fifty boys are sleeping on the stone floor of the stables in Derindje who until the sacking of Bardesag on June 23, five weeks ago, were inmates of our orphanage there. They were rushed out on only a few hours' notice.

At Derindje I found a shack 5x12 made from packing boxes once filled with Oregon clothes, while another box bearing an Oregon name was used as a bread box. The shack is used as sleeping quarters for five people.

With Dr. Esther Pohl Lovejoy I visited our hospital at Iamit. This hospital is conducted jointly by the Near East Relief and the American Medical Woman's Association. A view obtained from the steps of the hospital, gardens, fields, the gulf, forest and hills, but perhaps the most significant to us was the sight of Old Glory flying on the destroyer "Brooks," which Admiral Byrd has placed there to see that American property, American lives and the orphans in American care are safe.
