Christmas

SOUND over all waters, reach out from all lands. The chorus of voices, the clapping of hands. Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the dawn. Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born!

With glad jubilation bring hope to the nations! The dark night is ending and dawn has begun. Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun. All speech flows to music, all hearts beat as one! Sing the bridal of nations, with chorals of love. Sing out the war culture and sing in the love. To the hearts of the people long time is over. And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord!

Clasp hands of the nations in strong conviction! The dark night is ending and dawn has begun. Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun. All speech flows to music, all hearts beat as one! Sing, hymns of peace, the march of peace! Rise, west, north and south, let the long quietness. Sing of glory to God, peace to man of good will! Rise, joining in chorus. The heavens bend o'er us! The dark night is ending and dawn has begun. Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun. All speech flows to music, all hearts beat as one!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

And the Postman Passed the House

By MARY GRAMM COOPER

Copyright, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.

IT WAS Christmas morning. Old Hiram Palmer sat by the window waiting for the postman. Christmas eve had been rather bleak. He had seen, from the window, groups of people passing from time to time, hurrying, smiling, such gay, happy people.

Hiram was old, too old. He had outlived his friends, his immediate family, his day had long since gone by. He had given generously to hospitals and charitable institutions and a number of personal presents. He always, for example, sent some of the large baskets of fruit the town's leading shop arranged so attractively, to those he knew would never buy themselves such delicacies.

The last Christmas he had only received two presents. One from his nephew out West and another from a grandchild.

He was waiting for these now. The postman came along the street. Eagerly old Hiram waited. And then he got up and went to the door.

But the postman had passed by. "Are you sure, you have nothing for me?" he called out.

"Look more carefully. I was expecting some packages."

The postman looked again.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Palmer, but there is nothing here."

Slowly Hiram went back into the lonely little house. He had lived too long.

For his nephew had said:

"I guess I won't bother about Uncle Hiram this year. It's a nuisance to shop, and anyway what does he care about a necktie? He can buy all he wants!"

And his grandchild had said:

"I've got to cut down my Christmas list. It's so long."

And she had run her pencil through her grandfather's name.

For she had said:

"Christmas is for young people. He's too old to care about presents and a handkerchief or two which I might send him!"

Christmas Eve in the Kitchen

Copyright, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.

By ELEANOR E. KING.

IN THE kitchen of an apartment building in the city was seated a large, husky man with a little girl of about seven, on one knee, and a boy of perhaps six, on the other knee.

"But grandpa, I don't see why Santa Claus doesn't come," said little Doris. "We have waited so long out here in this old kitchen."

At this, Master Fred laboriously climbed down from his grandpa's knee and ran over to the kitchen door, and then to the window.

"Isn't it disgusting, grandpa? I can't even see him coming."

"Well, you know," said grandpa, as Fred climbed back upon his knee. "Santa Claus was a little boy once himself, and he knows how impatient little boys are. He has a hard time, though. Every year he has more boys and girls to bring toys to than he had the year before."

"But grandpa," said Doris, "I never knew Santa Claus was ever a little boy."

"Oh, yes," asserted grandpa firmly. "Once upon a time a group of fairies were playing around in an open place under some trees and they found a little baby asleep. They took the baby to their queen. The fairies loved the little baby, so they begged the queen to let them keep him and take care of him. The queen consented and the little boy 'Claus' thrived under the care of the fairies."

"B-h-h! Grandpa, I think he's coming, interrupted Fred as he again climbed down and ran to the window. "Nothing doing," he said with much disgust and gave a signal with his arm like the flagman does when telling a train to stop.

Grandpa obeyed the signal and continued: "He lived under the care of the fairies until he grew to be quite a man. Then the queen ordered her fairy workmen to build 'Claus' a hut, as he was a mortal and could not live the way the fairies did, any longer. 'Claus' had lots of time when he got into his new home and he occupied it by carving things. The fairies had taught him how to whistle and he began making all sorts of toys."

"There was a village some distance from his hut and every time he heard of a little boy or girl down in the village who was sick, he took them one of his little toys. The children grew to like him ever so much. After a while he became acquainted with so many children that he found it hard to get around and see them all so often. He decided that he would work all year making toys, and then go around and find out which of the children had been good, and leave them presents."

"When the fairies heard of this plan they were delighted and gave Santa Claus four reindeer and a sled to help him out."

"After many years of this hard work Santa Claus began to show signs of old age. The fairies realized that Santa Claus was a mortal and would die, so they—"

"Santa Claus has come," some one shouted from the front room.

"Hurry and finish, grandpa. What did they do?" queried Doris nervously.

"They gave Santa Claus everlasting life so that he could make little children happy always," smiled grandpa.

"Oh, I am so glad," said both of the kiddies.

"Now, to see what Santa brought," said grandpa, and all three made a rush for the parlor.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

THE best thing to give to your enemy is forgiveness; to an opponent, tolerance; to a friend, your heart; to your child, a good example; to a father, deference; to a mother, conduct that will make her proud of you; to yourself, respect; to all men, charity.—F. M. Balfour.

DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

Patience—Aren't you sorry now you didn't do your Christmas shopping early?

Patience—Why, I'm going to. I'm going out early this evening to do it.

Removing Pencil Marks. Indelible pencil marks may be removed by soaking for a few minutes in alcohol and then washing in the regular way. The alcohol is just as effective after the material thus stained has been washed and ironed.

Uncompromisingly Merciless. "Christmas comes but once a year," said the ready-made philosopher. "Yes," replied Mr. Growcher; "a tornado doesn't come even as often as that. But consider how long it takes to get over it."

Do your Christmas Shopping now. Always read the ads.

OREGON IS CUTTING T. B. OUT OF CATTLE HERDS

Bovine tuberculosis eradication work is progressing rapidly in Oregon. State and federal men are working along both the accredited herd and circumscribed area plan. There are already nearly 100 accredited herds in the state located in 19 counties. Fifteen counties are engaged in circumscribed area testing and others will start the work in 1932.

The department of agriculture report for September shows a total of 2,500 accredited cattle in Oregon with 6,805 herds comprising 87,273 cattle under government supervision. One thousand three hundred and fifty herds totaling 19,500 cattle are on the waiting list.

Oregon stands in seventh place in the United States in number of cattle under state and federal supervision and is second in number of cattle once tested. The appropriation for this work is far less in Oregon than in most other states. Washington has more than double the Oregon appropriation and California about ten times as much.

The splendid results secured in this state have been possible only through the close co-operation existing between state and federal inspectors, county farm bureaus and the college extension service.

Gift Package of Fruit is Popular

The old question which is always raised at this season of the year is with us again, "What shall I send for Christmas?" Deciding this question will cause worry for more people than will the disarmament conference.

The practice of sending a box of Oregon fruit to friends and relatives in the east is becoming more popular than ever in recent years and it is a very appropriate way to remember them during the holiday season. The one objection to this sort of gift is its weight which eliminates some kinds of fruit because of the expense of shipping long distances.

To overcome this difficulty nearly all of the large packers of prunes produce small packages weighing from five to ten pounds packed especially for the holiday trade. Heavy sales of these packages are being reported at the present time. A majority of them will be shipped east as gifts, and some of them will go as far as England and Scotland. The unusually fine quality and size of the fruit is a factor which is influencing many people in selecting the package to send as a gift.

This style of package is especially popular in Scotland and the Oregon Growers association has sent large lots there to meet the demand during the Christmas season.
