House cleaning is near.

Spring is just around the corner.

Forest Grove Creamery, that sounds good!

Look up that old lawn mower and get it in tune for spring cutting.

Garden tools will soon be in lively demand.

There are plenty of good things to say about this fine town without kicking about something or somebody. Try boosting awhile and you will feel better.

Don't be ready to run down your town to the first new-comer you meet. Say a good word for the community instead of knocking it.

A SPOTTED COW

About six miles east of Gresham, which is six miles east of Portland, is a small farm on which is a black and white cow whose herd book name is Stanhope Belle Johanna No. 682,677 and which is probably shortened to "Belle" for barnyard use.

This cow holds the Oregon state record for milk production and the world's record for milk produced in seven days and in thirty days. Her year's production of milk and butter fat shows a profit over expenses that would make some industrial corporations look like a peanut stand.

In seven days she gave 850.7 pounds of milk which is nearly 430 quarts, or 61 quarts a day. In this amount of milk was 34.22 pounds of butter fat, which is the equivalent of 42 pounds of butter or six pounds of butter a day. In thirty days she gave 3560.6 pounds of milk (one and three fourths tons) which contained 128.32 pounds of butter fat, the equivalent of 160 pounds of butter or five and a third pounds a day. Her year's product was 32,453.8 pounds of milk (more than sixteen tons) in which was 1242.50 pounds of butter fat or the equivalent of 1553 pounds of butter (three-fourths of a ton). Her best day's milking was 138 pounds or 69 quarts.

Sixty-nine quarts of milk in one day! Some milkmen go to town daily with no more than sixty-nine quarts of milk as the product of a whole dairy herd.

If this cow's butter sold at forty cents a pound her year's product of butter was worth $621; and if the skim milk sold at five cents a gallon, this added $200 to the sum of the year's earnings. Her calf was probably worth $1000 if it could be had at that figure. If it was worth that money her year's product was more than $1800. You can buy eighteen ordinary cows for that money

This wonderful cow did not just happen. When the Pilgrim Fathers landed in America the ancestors of this cow were spotted cattle pasturing in the Low Countries—Holland, Flanders, Denmark. And ever since that day the owners of these black and white cattle have been selecting the best for breeding and throwing away the poor ones, till they have developed a single cow that is a whole dairy in herself.—Portland Telegram.

A lot of newspapers on hand and and get them at five cents a bunch. 10tf

NEW LAND CLEARING METHOD AROUSES INTEREST

The new land clearing method, featuring the Zysset Stump Burner which was invented by Mr. Zysset and developed through the investigations of the Oregon Experiment Station has aroused so much interest in the Northwest that the demand for demonstrations is taxing the resources of the college to supply. The O. A. C. extension service cooperating with the county agricultural agent is scheduling additional demonstrations for many weeks ahead. The demonstrations are in charge of Prof. H. G. Scudder, chief in farm management, whose investigations in land clearing covering the last six years have established the succes of the new method.

The first demonstration was given in Clackamas county and proved of such interest and value that requests for ten more demonstrations in different counties were made within the succeeding two week. The demonstrations are the most extensive ever undertaken by the extension service of the college, requiring a week of field work for each one.

The great reduction in cost and the extreme practicability of the new method is of intense interest to men who have land to clear, and the demonstrations have been clear and convincing. Following the first demonstration in Clackamas county, four others have been given—one in Washington county and one in Linn county and two in Columbia county.

The atendance at these five demonstrations has been morethan one thousand, all men directly interested in land clearing. The possibilities of service to the state from the results of the investigations of the experiment station in land clearing are limited only by the area of logged-off land.

Out of nearly two million acres of logged-off and and burned over stump land in Oregon, Professor Scudder says that nearly one million acres meets the requirements as to soil qualities and topography necessary to make them satisfactory for agricultural use. Some of these stump lands are of the very highest quality for farming, not only because of favorable soil anl climate conditions and a satisfactory topography, but also because of good location of the land.

Thousands of acres of stump land now lying waste and idle and a burden to the tax-payer, may be found along the lower Columbia River Highway, convenient to transportation by river, railway and truck, and immediately accessible to the markets of the world. For many years these valuable lands have been awaiting a method of reclamation suffieiently economical to justify their development. The new method worked out by the Oregon experiment tation has, for the first time, found a way in which these lands can be cleared at a cost within thereach of small capital and at a total expense much less than the actual market value of theland when cleared.

Demonstrations of the new method were given Saturday, February 25, at Mist, in the Nehalem valley with a special illustrated lecture covering the method at Jewel, the night of February 24, preceeding the demonstration. Further demonstrations were given in Clatsop county Saturday, March 4, near Knappa, Columbia River Highway. Other demonstrations will be scheduled later in the spring in Polk, Linn and Hood counties.

"The big stump," according to Professor Scudder, is the real problem in land clearing The small stump can be handled with puller and powder in the ordinary way, efficiently and economically. It is the big stump, charcteristic of the Northwest and Pacific coast regions, the removal of which is so costly with ordinary methods as to have been prohibitive of land clearing development throughout this region for the last twenty years or more. Thousands of acresof big stump land of the finest character have lain idle and unproductive because of the exresive cost of clearing.

"The new method has solved the question of cost for the big stump removal," says Professor Scudder. "Not only from all parts of Oregon but from the sister states of California and Washington have come many requests to the Oregon Agricultural College for lectures and demonstrations of the new land clearing method."
