REBELS DEFEATED.
Portuguese Regulars Twice Win at Farmos

General Krieger, the recent rebel chief, has surrendered to the Portuguese authorities, General Krieger, the recent rebel chief, has surrendered to the Portuguese authorities, having been compelled to retreat from the Portuguese city of Farmos, where he had established his headquarters. The Portuguese forces, under the command of General Krieger, have suffered heavy losses in the Battle of Farmos, but managed to recapture the city and defeat the rebel forces. The Portuguese authorities have announced that they will now move on to other rebel strongholds in the region.

Prohibitionists Also Nominate
Same Running Mate.

The Prohibitionists have nominated the same running mate as their presidential candidate, who is currently leading in the polls. This move has been seen as a strategic decision to increase their chances in the upcoming election. The Prohibitionists have been campaigning on a platform of prohibition, and their candidate has been heavily supported by voters who are concerned with the current state of alcohol production and distribution.

Some thoughts for the day:

"I am so glad we have left home" said the old man "now we can do the things we want to do."

"Yes," replied the old woman, "now we can see the world."

"But," said the old man, "I thought we were leaving home."
