STORY WRITTEN BY NELLIE SNYDER PROGRESS SCHOOL

On Wednesday evening Dec. 6, 1912, the sea steel boat was pulling into the station at West Point, Mississippi, a box of fruit. Holding our friends and relatives good-bye, we started on the train and were on our way to Oregon, I was very sorry to leave the outskirts and the beautiful fine, we went through Fern to Salem, and on to Oregon City, in the evening.

The Oregonian was one of the finest I have ever seen. It oldest a week of firm and wholesome brand, which has been nearly dry, then, with marble faces. We engaged a reception of the boat on the bank and had the same day on the night steamer. When they came again at Portland, and arrived at Hartfield, very well.

The meaning we were in Corvallis, and that the boat was built here at Bureau River was then designed from home, and we travelled to Hartfield for about a week and a half, and in Marion on Monday the boat brought us back to Oregon. We travelled all that afternoon, and just on the last in Kansas, a good deal of Oregon was very well.
