THE MAKING OVER OF MAYBRIDGE

He turned the corner and walked up the side street, making comments as he went. "Bill Graves' fence looks a few pickets more shy than it used to; the vacant lot at the corner of Center Street continues to be the main depository of rubbish, and Hiram Jenkins' barn is still waiting for its first coat of paint. The song is wrong," he murmured again.

"The old home's just what it used to be." Then his gaze turned across the street in the direction of a pretty park. "I've been a little harsh," he said. "There isn't a more attractive town anywhere than Maybridge would be if the few rusty spots could be brightened up. There's Grace Park with its fine old trees and pretty flower gardens; there's the Spencer home with its magnificent grounds, and there's the row of fine old residences along Elm Street. Why, Maybridge has all the essentials of an ideal town, but it sure does need a little making over."

Then the young man's thoughts turned to the dear ones he was about to surprise, and a few moments later there was a fond greeting in the old homestead.

Ten years before George Hollister, then not out of his teens, had left Maybridge to make his way in a large Western city.

Starting with a small position, the income of which barely kept him alive, he had risen rapidly.

Each year he wrote home that at the first opportunity he would return for a visit. But new and greater responsibilities forced him to defer the home-going until a decade had slipped by.

His last advancement had made George's time his own, and without warning he had quietly returned to surprise and delight his parents and younger sister.

Renewing acquaintance occupied the larger part of the next day and in the evening his proud father took him to the monthly meeting of the Men's Club of Calvary Church.

The Beaverton Base Ball Team extends a vote of thanks to the young Ladies of Beaverton and vicinity for their kindness in preparing Baskets for the Basket Social Benefit for the Ball Club Saturday night.

Studebaker

"Young man, when you buy a buggy, be sure it's a Studebaker"

Sound advice from the man who has been driving one for twenty years.

When you buy a Studebaker buggy you are buying all the skill, experience and science in buggy building that half a century can produce. You are protecting yourself against the mistakes of younger builders.

You will always be proud of the Studebaker nameplate, for there isn't a buggy on the road that is its equal for style, luxury and good looks.

Flexible bent-reach gear, graceful lines, solid corner, plugless body, double-ironed shafts, are a few of the special Studebaker features.

The new close-fitting shifting rail is enough in itself to make you buy a Studebaker buggy.
