BEAVERTON APPLES GO TO CHICAGO LAND SHOW

THE OWL

VOL. 1, NO. 50. BEAVERTON, OREGON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1913. SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR.

CUP IS HERE!

And we have found another good sport by name of B. E. Toombs, president of the Archer, and Wiggins Baseball League, 1913. Here is a man, who stands by his convictions. In spite of hard wirepulling by some of the other teams, he awards the beautiful pennant CUP to Beaverton. Good Boy Toombs, we haven't had the pleasure of meeting you, but we know the baseball situation here, and by your decision, we must say B. E. Toombs of the Piedmont Pharmacy, corner Union avenue and Killingsworth street, is one of the best old sports in the world. A gentleman on the square!

Here is the telegram received by Manager Hardy of the Home team;

"After due consideration I have authorized Archer and Wiggins to deliver the trophy to the Beaverton team, having proclaimed them the legitimate winner." "B. E. TOOMBS, President"

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT

Mr. O'Connell, an recent employe at the car shops southeast of town, met with a painful accident last Thursday at 1:15 p. m. While working at the drill press he caught his hand in the wheel and received terrible injuries, his left arm being twisted severely and broken in a number of places, the bones protruding through the skin in sevaral places before his fellow workmen could stop the machine. He was rushed up town on a handcar in time to take the 1:39 Tillamook train for the Good Samaritan Hospital, Portland, where his injuries were taken care of. From late reports, he is recovering.

A PLOWMAN KILLED

Frank Klineman, aged 60 years, while plowing a half mile from Forest Grove, was killed in a very peculiar manner. The lines were about his neck, and when the plow struck a root the double-trees broke. The team started to run and Klineman was dragged over the implement, from which he received injuries that caused death a few hours later, the unfortunate man never regaining consciousness. George Sloan and Art Caples, who were close by, took the injured man to town for medical aid, but to no avail. The dead man is a native of Ohio, and lived with the Sloan family for some time. He had no family. Dr. Ira E. Barrett, coroner, went to the Grove today to investigate the death. Deceased was an uncle of the Klineman Brothers of North Hillsboro.

Be on deck next Sunday, November 23, at Hardy's Confectionery with your baseball suits, and have your picture taken with the Pennant CUP. 2 p. m. sharp.

Mother Goose will make her bow to the people of Beaverton at the Grange Hall in the evening of November 25. She will be accompanied by her large family, including Bo Peep, Boy Blue, Simple Simon and his friend the Pieman, Tommy Tucker, King Cole and other favorites.

There will also be singing, recitations and drills by members at the Beaverton school. Solos by local talent and the "Big 4" will sing. A basket social will follow the program, and all the ladies are urged to bring baskets filled with goodies and the gentlemen to come with numerous dimes to buy the same. Instead of bidding on the baskets, the gentlemen will bid on the backs of the ladies' heads seen through a hole in a curtain.

Tigard, Ore.—Citizens of Tigard, 11 miles from Portland, in the Tualatin valley, are boosting for boosting for a cannery to be established there for the absorption of the surplus crops of the territory adjacent. A committee Saturday night waited on W. D. Skinner, traffic manager of the Oregon Electric, asking his co-operation, and Mr. Skinner told them he would help in every way. An experienced canneryman will be secured to inform the people just what is needed to assure the success and permanence of such a project.

HELP THE TOWN

The Owl has the largest circulation of any paper in Beaverton, and is constantly gaining new subscribers and boosting for the town. We have some mighty good firms advertising their goods in these columns. But we would be pleased to see every business in Beaverton represented not only from a financial standpoint, but to boost the good town to the front in the estimation of strangers. Over 800 papers are sent out every week; a average of 5 persons read the same or 4,000 actual readers per week.

Think this over, gentlemen. If every business house in Beaverton will carry an ad. in this paper, we will soon have one of the best papers in the county. Let us all pull together for a Greater Beaverton and Beaverton business men, forget all differences of the past, and now get ready for the holidays and 1914. The editor of this paper will meet you with a glad hand.

Chas. W. Tarlton Disappeared in 1895

Attorney John M. Wall and District Attorney E. B. Tongue have filed suit in circuit court to escheat about an acre of land to the state of Oregon, the property in question way back in 1895, belonging to one Chas. W. Tarlton. In May of that year Tarlton left his home near Beaverton to go to Portland, and since that time not a word has been heard from him. In 1897 the Beaverton people believed him dead, and Alfred Davis was appointed administrator. Davies nursed the little place along, and succeeded in getting enough from rentals, and the sale of a few dollars worth of tools, to keep the taxes paid. He was discharged from further liability in 1897, and since then the acre, with its little house, has been in various hands. Fred Hovendon is now on the place, and has been there for several years. Tarlton had no relatives so far as known, and the State of Oregon now asks that the property escheat to the commonwealth. Whether Tarlton was killed in Portland, or whether he died in some lonesome place, and the body never recovered, or whether he shipped to sea, will probably never be known, unless Tarlton is alive somewhere and makes his present whereabouts known. He was aged about 30 years when he so mysteriously pulled out of Beaverton.
