CONGRESSIONAL MATTERS.

Interesting Wrangle in the House Over the Bill Pensioning Soldiers Who Fought in Indian Wars.

Secretary Elkins has formally approved the proposition for the construction of two free bridges across the Willamette river at Portland, Or., according to the plans of the local engineers.

The House Committee on Indian Affairs has favorably reported Senator Dolph's bill granting to the Blue Mountain Irrigation Company a right of way for reservoirs and a canal through the Umatilla Indian reservation in Oregon.

There is quite an interesting wrangle over the bill now pending in the House for pensioning soldiers who fought in the Indian wars. Representative Wilson of Washington and Senator Mitchell of Oregon are insisting that, while pensioning those soldiers who fought in the Indian wars of a comparatively recent period, those who participated in the early Indian wars in Oregon and Washington should also receive their reward.

It is on this proposition that the two Houses are now in disagreement, but it is hoped that the early Indian fighters who are still living will be included. The bill which passed the House to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada provides that when the President shall be satisfied that the passage through any canal or lock connected with navigation on the St. Lawrence river, the Great Lakes or the waterways connecting the same of any vessels of the United States, or of cargoes or of passengers in transit to or from any of the United States, is prohibited, or made difficult or burdensome by the imposition of tolls or otherwise, which he shall deem to be reciprocally unjust and unreasonable, he shall have power to suspend the right of passage through the St. Mary's Falls canal so far as it relates to vessels owned by subjects of any government discriminating against the United States.

Senator Pettigrew will very soon report a bill of great importance to every county, township, school district and State where there are Indians who have taken lands in allotment under the present laws. So soon as Indians take the lands in allotments they become citizens and are allowed to vote, but they are not obliged to pay any taxes. This bill proposes that the government shall pay the taxes for the Indians to the same amount and at the same rates as the white people situated alongside of the Indians, the object being that, as the government says the Indians shall be taxed, the government should provide for the payment of taxes in States where Indians are located and where they receive the benefits of taxation and civilization. It seems like a very sensible thing, and will perhaps be favorably considered in the Senate.

Further investigation into the proposal to issue a proclamation opening the Colville Indian reservation leads to the conclusion that no such proclamation will be made until after the lands have been surveyed and the Indians have secured their allotments. The reason for this course of action is to prevent the endless litigation which is sure to follow, especially if white settlers go in and make selections which after survey the Indians desire. Under the law the Indian can oust the white man from his claim, and if a white man is fortunate enough to secure a valuable mineral tract, a person wanting the land could easily induce the Indian to oust him and cause a great deal of trouble and expense. So it is probable that the $35,000 appropriation for surveying the land will be immediately expended and the Indians requested to take allotments, after which the proclamation opening the land to the white settlers will be issued.

One-third of the students abroad, it is said, die prematurely from the effects of bad habits acquired in college. During the last year there graduated from the medical colleges of the United States about 5,000 young doctors.

England, with 94 universities, has 2,725 more professors and 51,814 more students than the 300 universities of the United States. The revenues of Oxford and Cambridge represent a capital of about $75,000,000. The University of Leipzig is worth nearly $20,000,000.

The oldest college in North America was founded in 1831—the College of St. Idefonso in the City of Mexico. The next oldest is Laval College, Quebec. On June 13 the School Board of St. Paul, Minn., abolished the distinction of sex in the matter of salaries, and will hereafter pay the women the same as men for doing the same work.
