Actual tests show the Royal Baking Powder to be 27 per cent. stronger than any other brand on the market. If another baking powder is forced upon you by the grocer, see that you are charged the correspondingly lower price.

Bread, biscuit, cakes and muffins are not known in most delicate and perfect quality where Royal Baking Powder is not used.

Why.

There was a new dog at the farm house, and baby, aged 4, had been told that he must not play with it. On his way to the farm he was reminded of his mamma's injunction not to play with the strange dog, and he exclaimed in a tone which showed him proudly conscious of his virtue:

"Of course I wouldn't for the world do what mamma tells me not to!" Then, descending suddenly from this unusual height of morality, he added confidentially: "And 'sides, he snapped at one of the men yesterday."—Wide Awake.

The Enterprising Office Boy.

Irato Citizen (to office boy)—I want to see the editor.

Office Boy—What do you want with him?

Irato Citizen—I want to thump the clothes off of him.

Office Boy—Oh, do you? All right; give me your name, age, etc., and fifty cents.

Irato Citizen—What's that for?

Office Boy—That's the price of death notices; half the regular rates, you know.—Breton Traveller.

Scene—a lonely road. Tramp—Excuse me, sir; do you happen to have seen a policeman anywhere about?

Tramp—Policeman? No.

Tramp—Or anybody else?

Gent—I have not met a single individual during the last half hour.

Tramp—Indeed! Then perhaps you will have the goodness to hand me your purse and your watch.—Exchange.

Museum Skeleton—My wife, the fat lady, doesn't seem to care as much for me as she used to. I've noticed it since that other skeleton came to town.

"She likes him better, perhaps."

"Very likely. He weighs four pounds less than I do. I suppose that's the reason."—Yankee Blade.

A Charitable Family.

First Tramp—I could have told you that you wouldn't get anything at that house.

Second Tramp—Well, I was just up there and found a plate waiting for me at the door.

"What kind of a plate?"

"Why, a door plate!"—Yonker's Statesman.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. Try the remedy; it cures catarrh.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite young. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle that disagreeable catarrhal smell had left him. He appears as well as any one. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise, there was marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Edwin Forrest.

From Joseph Jefferson's autobiography in The Century we quote the following: Edwin Forrest, with all his faults, had warm and generous impulses. I know of one instance where a poor, old actress went to him in distress. In former years he had known her father and respected him. Touched by her appeal for assistance, he lent her a large sum of money, with the almost certain knowledge that he would never get it back again. It was never made public; no one knew of it but the receiver and myself. The Forrest home has done much good, and is likely to do more; and those actors who either by age or by infirmities have been debarred the privilege of following their profession will naturally be grateful for this rich legacy.

Even in the days of his theatrical fame and prosperity Forrest was an austere man, and as he grew older he became morbidly misanthropic, holding himself aloof from all but his most intimate friends. The latter part of his life was embittered, too, by illness and the loss of public favor. Until the closing years of his career he had been blessed with perfect health; this became suddenly shattered, and the unexpected attack wrecked his dramatic power. He might have borne the stroke of illness, but to one whose imperious nature could not brook the faintest slight the loss of public admiration was a heavy blow; one, too, that would have shocked a wiser and more even tempered man than Edwin Forrest. Still he toiled on, and was unjustly censured for acting past his powers. But what was he to do? His physicians told him that he must act if he would live; the wheel must be kept in motion or it would fall. His performances in the larger cities were given to empty houses, while bright and youthful aspirants were drawing from him all his old adherents.

His former friends forsook him, and naturally, too; they could not bear the pain of witnessing their favorite of their days declining night by night. No actor can hope to hold an interest in his audience merely by what he has done in years gone by; in acting it is the present that the public have to deal with, not the past. To witness age and decrepitude struggling to conceal their weakness in the mimic scene is too painful. The greater our affection for the artist the less can we bear to see him suffer and go down.

In the vain hope of struggling on, the old tragedian sought "the provinces." Here the people flocked in crowds to see the great actor that they had heard of from their childhood; not with the faintest hope that they would find the grandeur of the past, but from the curious desire to see a ruined tower just before it falls.

The Oregon Boot.

A decided novelty in footwear is the "Oregon boot," so called, with one of which a train robber who arrived in St. Louis was manacled. The boot weighed 18½ pounds, and a detective spent fifteen minutes in opening the combination by which it was secured to the prisoner's foot. Thus hobbled there would seem to be a small chance for a malefactor to effect his flight from custody unless he should somehow learn the combination. Practically he might as well be anchored to a fireproof safe.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Smuggling a Painting Out of Italy.

If a usually well informed correspondent is correct, this is how the famous picture of Caesar Borgia, sold for 600,000 francs to the Rothschild family by Prince Borghese, was sent out of Rome. A coating of wax was laid over the famous Caesar, and an artist painted the portrait of Pope Leo XIII on the wax. It was then dispatched to its Parisian destination, the coating of wax carefully peeled off, and the famous Caesar now ornaments the Rothschilds' great gallery of masterpieces.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Babies Afraid of Black Clothes.

At sight of a strange person, object or animal a baby will cry. Anything black will produce more disturbance in the mind of a baby than anything white. A child refusing to go to a relative in dark clothes would not hesitate if the suit were changed to a light color, with a white, red or blue necktie.—Baby.

Accustomed to Irish Bogs.

One Irish snipe shooter, Mr. Foster, of Dublin, was used to Irish bogs. He was so cool that he had been known, when bogged and going down, to kill a bird with his right barrel, another with his left, and then throw his gun for a friend to catch.—"Forty-five Years of Sport."

The demand for willow wood for artificial legs has grown immensely in recent years. The funny men on the stage talk glibly of cork legs, but light willow limbs are more popular.

A FEMALE VIDOCA.

An Indianapolis Woman Who Brought Her Brother's Slayer to Justice.

One evening in August, 1880, according to the Indianapolis correspondent of the Chicago Herald, a man called at the police station and reported that he had been held up near the city limits and robbed of $80 and a gold watch. The stranger gave his name as William Wesley Wise. As he told a circumstantial story a number of officers accompanied him to the alleged scene of the robbery. When they reached the bridge over White river the Big Four train was leaving for Chicago, and one of the officers suggested that the train be stopped, as it was probable that the robbers had boarded it. The train was flagged, and a man was seen to leave the tender and run.

The officers started in pursuit and several shots were fired. Wise was the fleeing man fell to the ground and a moment later was picked up dead, a ball from one of the pistols having passed entirely through his body. The deceased proved to be Thomas Quinlan, a fireman of the Midland railroad, who was on his way to take out his train from Lebanon. Quinlan had had some trouble before coming home, and when he saw the officers about the train he supposed they intended to arrest him, and for that reason he tried to avoid them and jumped from the train. Suspicion fell upon Captain Campbell as the one who fired the fatal shot but the autopsy demonstrated that the ball was much larger than that carried by his pistol, and one of the policemen was quite sure that Wise himself had done the shooting.

After this fatal termination of the hunt, Wise made so many contradictory statements that it was soon suspected that he had imposed upon the officers and an innocent man had been killed for a crime that had never occurred. A watch was kept upon Wise, and every day the evidence became more positive that he had not only killed Quinlan, but that he had not been robbed. At any rate it was certain that Quinlan had not robbed him. As none of the pistols carried by the police were of the caliber indicated by the ball taken from Quinlan's body, the conclusion was forced upon the police that Wise had fired the fatal shot. He was about to be arrested on a charge of murder, when he suddenly disappeared.

After several months of ineffectual search the crime was suffered to pass into oblivion. A factor was at work in the case, however, that the police knew nothing of. Quinlan's sister, an attractive young lady from whom he had parted but a few moments before he was brought home a corpse, took up the search. Finally she learned that a sister of Wise had moved to Indianapolis. In order to gain the desired information she was compelled to move very cautiously, and with womanly tact she soon fell upon a plan. She adopted the name of May Morgan, and sought acquaintances among the people who lived in the immediate neighborhood of Wise's sister, and with these she visited socially for some four or five months. She soon discovered that Wise's sister was in correspondence with friends or relatives in different parts of Indiana.

She learned one day in a chance conversation with a neighbor of Wise's sister that the latter had a friend at Perkinsville, Ind., with whom she was in correspondence. After thinking over the matter she determined to make one more effort to find the murderer, and she went to Perkinsville. She was a stranger in the place, but a happy expedient was suggested to her. She went to the postmaster and told him that she was looking for a gentleman who had a relative in Indianapolis, but that she could not recall his name; that the man was in correspondence with his sister there, and she wanted to know the name of the man to whom the Indianapolis letters were delivered. The village postmaster immediately gave her the name of William Wesley as a man who frequently posted letters to some one in Indianapolis.

The problem was solved in an instant, and the young detective saw that Wise had dropped his surname and was known only by his Christian name in the community. She managed to see him and make sure that he was the person wanted. Having located her man she returned to Indianapolis, and appearing before Judge Cox, of the criminal court, where an indictment had been returned against Wise soon after he fled from the city, she acquainted him with the facts regarding Wise's location. An officer was immediately sent to Perkinsville, where he was arrested and brought back to answer for his crime.

The Lottery to End.

It would appear by the following item from a recent issue of the New Orleans Times-Democrat that the suggestion in several newspapers of late, that the Louisiana State Lottery Company intend setting up business elsewhere, is erroneous; that it will close up shop on the expiration of its present charter.

In view of the contradictory rumors circulated regarding the intentions of the Louisiana State Lottery Company and in order to accurately answer numerous inquiries, a representative of the Times-Democrat yesterday interviewed Mr. Paul Conrad, the President of the company, with the result expressed below.

Reporter—Mr. Conrad, it was asserted some weeks ago in the Northern newspapers, and the statement has since been revived recently, that the company is about to remove to Nicaragua, and there, under a government franchise, open up the business on a grander scale than ever.

President Conrad—I have heard something of this, but there is no foundation for it. The company has officially stated that it bows to the decision of the Supreme Court and will respect the laws.

Reporter—Then have you no plans of future action?

President Conrad—I cannot state the case more strongly than was done at the time the company decided not to attempt to obtain a renewal of its charter. I can only repeat that the company will continue in business until the expiration of its present charter and then cease to exist. I cannot understand, after all that has been said, why there should be any confusion in the public mind about the matter.

Reporter—Have you any objection to my stating this as a finality for the satisfaction of the public?

President Conrad—None whatever.

Reporter—Some of the Eastern papers, Mr. Conrad, persistently assert that the lottery company continues to use the United States mails in the prosecution of its business; will you kindly tell me if that is true?

President Conrad—It is utterly untrue. We are obeying the law in its letter and spirit, and our agents everywhere are instructed to obey it. We are using the express companies only in our business, and in all our circulars are printed instructions to all persons dealing with us to avoid the mails.

A SENSATION ABROAD.

HOW AN AMERICAN DISCOVERY HAS AWAKENED EUROPE.

The Credit is Due to a Citizen of the United States, but the Benefits are Shared by the Entire World.

LONDON, May 20.—Considerable excitement exists among physicians in Europe as to the nature of the most dangerous of modern diseases, and whether it can be cured. Ten years ago Bright's disease of the kidneys was pronounced incurable by almost the entire medical faculty. To-day many of them are in doubt, and nearly all the most advanced declare that it not only can be regulated, but that it can be absolutely cured.

High authorities have taken steps to ascertain the exact views of the leading physicians of Europe on the subject, and their condensed opinions are given herewith:

Sir Morrell Mackenzie, the leading physician of England, said: "I would say generally that Bright's disease is curable, but the man or woman who is troubled with it must be careful of every action, almost of every thought."

Dr. MacLagan, physician to the Princess Christian, and other members of the Royal Family, says: "The name, Bright's disease, covers a multitude of complaints connected with the kidneys, particularly those complaints which are due to inflammation. How to arrest its progress is to answer the question as to what the latest cure may be."

Dr. William Edward Robson, physician of the Royal Navy, declared: "Like the majority of my professional brethren, I have long regarded Bright's disease as incurable. I think so no longer. Hundreds of my patients have been cured by the use of Warner's Safe Cure, and I am willing to acknowledge and recommend, thus frankly, the value of this great remedy."

Dr. Samuel Mills, of Charing Cross, said: "Bright's disease is not necessarily incurable. The duration of life will not be seriously impaired if proper precautions are taken."

Dr. Andrew Wilson, of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, asserts: "Warner's Safe Cure is of a safe character and perfectly reliable."

Prof. Gerhardt, of Berlin, says: "Bright's disease is curable except in cases of a shrinkage of the kidneys, and even then the patient may live from six months to twenty-five years, during which period improvements in health may be secured by the use of remedies insuring the normal action of the heart."

Dr. Hoese, of Berlin, says: "I have used Warner's Safe Cure myself, as I have been the victim, on taking the least cold, of rheumatism and palpitation of the heart. This sensibility has disappeared, also the action of the heart is quieter."

Prof. Winternitz, of Vienna, says of Bright's rheumatismal disease: "It is curable, and in its other forms life may be prolonged."

Dr. Gustav Weber, of Dessau, Germany, affirms: "By the use of 15 bottles of Warner's Safe Cure my general health has been restored, and I have completely cured myself of Bright's disease of the kidneys."

Dr. Dugardin Beaumets, of the Academy of Medicine, Paris, said: "The danger in Bright's disease results from the crippled condition of the kidneys, which no longer take out of the system poisons resulting from organic substances. The treatment consists in helping the inefficient action of the kidneys."

Dr. E. H. Whirsel-Huerlimann, of Whippengen, Switzerland, makes the following remarkable assertion: "I am a living example that Bright's disease is curable. I suffered with that complaint for years, and know that the improvement, appetite and strength have been caused through the use of Warner's Safe Cure."

The above facts prove what has been asserted by Mr. H. H. Warner, both in America and abroad, for years, that Bright's disease of the kidneys can be cured. When this claim was first made it was scoffed by physicians, but to-day the leading doctors and scientists in both hemispheres agree that Bright's disease not only may be regulated, but can actually be cured. This is both cause for gratitude to the thousands of helpless sufferers who have been restored to health and also for all patriotic people that this discovery for the worst known of all diseases emanated from America and was put forth by an American. Instead of feeling that the hand of death is laid upon the sufferer when the presence of this terrible disease is first discovered, there is ample assurance from the statements of the above-named physicians as to the cause and cure that no sufferer need despond.

Uncle Humsted—Have you good neighbors in the city? Frank Turner—We have no neighbors at all; we live in a flat.

THE RESULT OF MERIT.

When anything stands a test of fifty years among a discriminating people like the Americans, it is pretty good evidence that there is merit somewhere. The value of a medicine is best proved by its continued use from year to year by the same persons and families, as well as by a steady increasing sale. Few, if any, medicines have met with such continued success and popularity as has marked the introduction and progress of BRANDETH'S PILLS, which, after a trial of over fifty years, are conceded to be the safest and most effective purgative and blood purifier introduced to the public.

That this is the result of merit, and that BRANDETH'S PILLS actually perform all that is claimed for them, is conclusively proved by the fact that those who regard them with the greatest favor are those who have used them the longest.

BRANDETH'S PILLS are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

THE TEMPTATION.

To get out of doors in rough weather is not strong, but we are, many of us, compelled to face rough weather frequently. Diseases which arise from a chill are peculiar to no season of the year. This is true; therefore, there should be in the closet of every household—what? Not an unmedicated stimulant, absolutely devoid of anything but an excitant action, but a tonic combining, in the effective form of an invigorant and an alternative, the quality of defense against change of weather. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has three or four properties that no other article of its class possesses. Not only does it relieve the complaints which it eventually cures, it fortifies the system against the bad effects of changes of temperature, fatality and too often shown in the deadly form of "la grippe." It produces a radical change in the weakened condition of a system peculiarly liable to be attacked by it, and it tends to provide against the danger resulting from an impoverished condition of the blood and a disordered state of the liver or bowels.

"Well, if that ain't mean," exclaimed the prisoner; "every turned one of the stories in this here paper they've given me to read is continued. An' me to be hung next week!"
