THE CONDON GLOBE.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 20, 1893.

NOTICE.

The yearly subscription to the GLOBE is $1.50, invariably in advance. No deviation from this rule. The paper will be stopped at the end of the time for which it is paid unless further ordered and paid for. A blue pencil mark around this notice indicates that your subscription has expired, and if you wish the paper continued you should remit the amount as soon as possible.

GLOBOSITIES.

Read the new professional card of Darling & Hendricks, on page 1.

We regret that some interesting correspondence from Keys' Flat reachead us too late for this issue.

If you need any timber culture trees or any other kind of trees, send to C. E. Fell, Heppner. See his ad.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Scrivner of Heppner came over Friday and visited their relatives in this vicinity several days, returning home Tuesday.

The Antelope Herald says: "Breathe on your windows these frosty mornings; the alcoholic fumes will dissolve the frost almost immediately." Pretty tough on the readers of the Herald.

There is a London enterprise which supplies ready-made sermons for lazy parsons. This second-hand soul saving may do for Britishers but no self-repecting American sinner would submit to it.

David McConnell, formerly of The Dalles, a bright lad of 14 years, has secured a position as "devil" in the GLOBE office. He can pi type with as much ease as a printer of 20 years' experience.

Monday last Governor Pennoyer pardoned several convicts, among them being our F. M. Judd, who was sent up last April for one year. He was pardoned on recommendation of the district attorney.

J. P. Lucas and B. K. Searcy have been out all week on a hunting expedition in the vicinity of Camp creek. It is expected they will make some remarkable shots, whether they hit anything or not.

The state militia colonels, captains and other officers are demanding large appropriations for expenses, but the taxpayers are generally of the opinion that the state is paying enough for display. —Grant County News.

A grand neck-tie ball will be given at Condon on the night of Feb. 14th. This will be something new and novel here, and all the young folks for miles around expect to be present. Posters for the grand event will be printed this week.

Senator Steiwer introduced a joint resolution urging congress to make some effort to extend the time for making final proof in all cases under the railway forfeiture act. It passed both branches of the assembly on the 10th, and is now in Washington.

By an oversight we failed to mention in last issue the death of the little 8-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoss, which occurred at Arlington two weeks ago, of scarlet fever. It is a sad blow to the parents. Only a couple of weeks previous they lost their 3-year-old child.

George Gould at 28 is the youngest American who has inherited an estate that gives employment to 100,000 men. The three successive Astors have each been over 40 before they inherited their father's fortunes. William H. Vanderbilt was nearly 50, and his sons were 42 and 36 when he died.

Senator Huston's bill in the Oregon legislature for punishment for assault aims to put a stop to the practice of bullies, who, by abuse, endeavor to incite their enemies to a breach of law, in order that they may plead self-defense as an excuse for killing an opponent whom they have aggravated beyound human endurance.

The following from the Milton Eagle might be good advice for our own citizens: "As this is the beginning of a new year, let every citizen pull off his coat and labor for the upbuilding of the city. Do not let envy and jealousy deter you from doing your duty, for such a policy is neither popular nor sensible."

Last week our old friend T. C. Keizur showed us several samples from his gold mines near Cottage Grove, which are the richest we have yet seen in this section. He says they will assay about $2000 to the ton. He may not vary much from the truth when he says that "Old Cul will yet wear diamonds; now mind what I tell you!" Elsewhere in this issue he gives some interesting information about these mines.

The latest dispatches are to the effect that there is no hope of the time being extended for payment on forfeited railroad lands. Persons actually residing on forfeited lands have until Sept. 29, 1893, to purchase. Persons not residing on the forfeited lands, that they have under improvement, that is, fenced to the extent of 320 acres, have only to the 3d of next month to acquire title by purchase.

A civil case was heard before Squire Clark at Condon this week. Chas. Fix and the young Russian who had been in his employ since last summer, disagreed as to the amount of wages due the latter, Gabriel Bower. They resorted to law to settle the matter, and the jury decided in Gabriel's favor. He was allowed the full amount claimed, the costs also being taxed to Mr. Fix. Darling & Hendricks represented Bower and Mr. Fix conducted his own case.

It is admitted that Oregon has the poorest, most absurd, most unjust assessment system in existence. We hope that our present legislature will completely knock it out, says the Wallowa Chieftain, and enact a new law that will cause all property to be assessed at its true cash value to pay for the protection its owner enjoys. We also hope that the law will be so plain that such a senseless body as a "board of equalization will be unnecessary, and that there will be no loop-hole made for the wealthy to escape taxation by "exemption for indebtedness."

Senator Steiwer's bill for the protection of stockraisers provides that the branded hide must be shown with slaughtered animals offered for sale to butchers, and the butcher must keep a record of the brands, not only of such purchases, but also of the animals by him slaughtered. There are penalties of imprisonment provided for trading unbranded cattle, killing animals of unknown ownership, and mutilating artificial brands. The senator also has a bill prescribing a system of recording brands with county clerks. We believe a better way still would be to have the bill so amended as to require the advertising of all brands within the county in the official paper of the county.

A peculiar political incipient has just been reported from Illinois. It was one of the funniest complications that the postoffice department has ever experienced. The town had a German democrat as postmaster under Mr. Cleveland. When Harrison was elected he was succeeded by a republican postmaster, who died, and the office was then turned over to the widow. When Cleveland was elected last fall the German democrat thought that he also had been re-elected postmaster. He appeared at the postoffice with a wagon and persuaded the postmistress to allow him to remove the effects of the office to his place. He has since been running affairs fully convinced that Cleveland's re-election restored him as postmaster. Representative Hopkins reported the fact to the postoffice department and an inspector was detailed to restore the postmistress to her rights.

Lone Rock Rumblings.

Mr. Chas. Frazer and wife arrived home last week.

"The Beautiful" is about 3 in. deep; nights all-fired cold, days warm and pleasant. Some stock is being fed, and some are obliged to "root hog or die" on the hills.

Several of our Grangers have been suspended for non-payment of dues, and they are kicking like a mule in a hornet nest. We would suggest that they join the militia.

Our day school under the management of Prof. Stratton, seems to be progressing nicely. The roguish grins have departed from the faces of most of the scholars, and probably most of the bumps on their backs are leveled down—judging from reports.

Our people were pleased to see their old neighbors and friends, Mesdames Lucas and Nicklin, come up last week to assist with the meetings and pay a long-promised visit to their many friends here. We are informed that Messrs. L. W. Darling, Rev. Morehead and J. P. Lucas will be with us this week. Come on, boys; our motto is, "Cosmopolitan."

The revival meetings began here Sunday with a very large attendance, and every evening since, the house has been crowded. Quite a number are at the altar and some have already been converted. But the loudest guns who bombard christianity have not come in yet, but when they do show up, Rev. Rawlins will get to the zenith of his spiritualistic power, and we may look for scores of conversions. COWBOY.

Death of Cora Reis.

OLEX, Jan. 16, 1893.

The numerous friends of Miss Cora Antonette Reis were saddened to hear of her death, Monday morning, January 9, 1893, although the event was not wholly unexpected. About a year ago she took a severe cold, which resulted in that dread disease consumption, from which time her decline was sure and speedy. Everything possible was done for her by loving friends. Her father and two brothers were with her the last two days of her life. Sunday morning before she died she called her brothers to her bedside and requested them to repeat the Lord's Prayer aloud with her, which they did. She seemed wholly to have a child's trustful faith in our Heavenly Father, and was perfectly reconciled to die. A large number of friends were at her bedside when she was breathing her last. She asked them to pray for her, and then bid them all goodbye.

Her funeral took place from the residence of Mr. B. T. Snell, on Tuesday, Jan. 10th. The remains were taken to the Olex school house, where services were conducted by Rev. Dennison of Arlington, after which the body was laid to rest in the Olex cemetery.

Miss Reis was born at North Washington, Iowa, June 17, 1876. Her mother died when she was nine years old. One year after she mourned the loss of a baby sister. Since her mother's death, Cora had been sole housekeeper for her father.

She has passed out of the shadow
Into eternal day;
Why do we call it dying,
This sweet going away?"

A FRIEND.

A Newspaper Man Should Get The Plum.

Mr. J. H. Cradlebaugh, editor of the Hood River Glacier, and a staunch friend to the fraternity, says:

After mature deliberation we have raised our lightning rod and patiently await the storm after the 4th of March, in hopes the lightning may strike it in the shape of the appointment of register of The Dalles land office. We respectfully suggest in our own favor that since the 8th day of November last we have waxed fat, gaining 22 pounds in that time, on diet such as the country editor usually tackles, which is proof positive that the political pudding is the cause of it. We have grown too large indeed to longer remain a private individual, and must either have an office or have the Oregon legislature incorporate us. We feel that we are competent to fill the office and strong enough to draw the salary, thus reflecting credit on the party and deflecting cash to ourself—supplying a great need in either case. Besides this it would be a fitting recognition of the newspaper fraternity—the people who put others in office and get nothing themselves; the men who "lead the columns" in political battle, who marshal and drill the forces in time of peace; the men who get all the scars, no cash and a very limited credit. The truth is, the newspaper man is, so to speak, the war house in time of political battle, the beast of burden between fights, turned out to pick a precarious living on the range, fenced out of the public pasture, and only groomed when it is time for him to stand up and be shot at. These are our claims to recognition, and if we are to be turned down, we ask in all justice to an overworked and underpaid class of party workers that some other newspaper man be given the place.

The Bohemian Mines.

CONDON, Jan. 15th.

ED. GLOBE:—It may interest your readers to learn something about these gold mines, which promise to rival the great California mines of '49.

The Bohemian mines, several claims of which I own, are situated on the divide between the headwaters of the Umpqua and the Willamette, in both Lane and Douglas counties, 40 miles southeast of Cottage Grove. They were first discovered about 25 years ago, and were prospected with a 5-stamp mill, but the result was not satisfactory and they were temporarily abondoned. But within the last couple of years, work on them has been renewed and some rich discoveries made, the assay of some of the ore reaching several thousand dollars to the ton.

Two quartz mills are running there now at full blast, and several more will be put in as soon as spring opens. In one week a 5-mill stamp there recently cleaned up $3600.

While at Cottage Grove two weeks ago I learned that about 50 men are at work in the mines this winter, getting out ore ready for crushing in the spring. There are also some valuable placer diggings, known as "Steam Boat," a tributary of the North Umpqua, where a number of my old neighbors are at work and making fair wages. These are situated about 8 miles southwest of the Bohemian mines.

My opinion is that the Bohemian mines contain some as rich ore as can be found anywhere. Nearly every man in Cottage Grove has a showcase full of samples of rich ore, and I tell you it produces a pleasing sight to "Old Cul's" eagle optics. It is my intention to go back in the spring and develop my mines and locate others.

Cottage Grove is headquarters for these mines and bids fair to be a great city in the near future. In conclusion I wish to state emphatically that "Old Cul is strictly in it." T. C. KEIZUR.

A Great Offer.

From now until Feb. 5th, next month, we are prepared to send the weekly San Francisco Examiner and the Condon GLOBE one year for the trifling sum of $2.25. The regular price of both papers is $3. The Examiner is the leading paper of the United States, and the GLOBE comes next on the list.

How The Grange Pays.

A great many persons who do not belong to the Grange are at a loss to know in what way it is beneficial. The grange has developed new life among our farmers, and has set them to reading and thinking for themselves. The Grange has been a school for mutual instruction. The frequent meeting together to compare notes has been found to be wonderfully beneficial. Many a farmer has learned in the Grange how to best cultivate his land so as to enable him to obtain the largest product at the least expense. He has learned in the Grange and by reading his Grange paper, which, perhaps, formerly he did not take, the best mode of rearing stock and improving their breed. He has learned from the Grange debates the distinction between true and false economy, and to practice the former and avoid the latter. The Grange instructions have directly benefitted the farmers of the country to the value of many hundreds of thousands of dollars in developing the hidden resources of their lands, in systematizing farm work and in putting more thought and brains into the crops.

The benefits derived from the Grange, however, are not confined altogether to dollars and cents. That view alone of its benefits would be very narrow and sordid. The Grange has developed a new life among the farmers all over the land. Its benefits in that direction have been seen and recognized in at least 26 different states in which it is now flourishing. The social features of this organization have wrought wonders in thousands of our farm homes all over the country. More books, music and more papers are now found in our farm houses, and the boys and girls, who have heretofore found farm life irksome, are not leaving the old homestead, as they formerly did, to seek the more dangerous attractions of city life. "Great, indeed," as some one has said, "are the changes which the Grange has introduced in the way of improved social intercourse and intellectual effort among farmers." This change has astonished the nation, and is fast bringing to the front men of strong minds and great intellect, and who are, in many ways, takeing the lead in social, political and economic progress. The day has passed, never to re turn, when farmers where not expected to think for themselves. They are now doing a large amount of thinking, and, what is better still, giving others who needed such prodding, occasion to do much thinking in a direction different from their heretofore lines of thought.

"The industrial and producing elements of the city and town and country are joining hands in the great revival of human rights, and in the onward march of material, social and political progress." These are some of the ways in which the Grange is made so pay.
