Curious Chinese Playing Cards.

A pack of Chinese playing cards is a genuine curiosity. They are generally printed in black on thin cardboard, the average width and breadth being about that of the finger of a human being. In some cases they are only half an inch broad and about 3½ inches in length. The length, no odds what the size, is always at least six times that of the width. Some of the packs have queer representations of our "kings," "queens" and "knaves" stamped upon them in black. Others are decorated with the figures of animals, birds and fishes. Those used by mandarins and high officials bear only figures of mythological creatures.—St. Louis Republic.

Another Ascent of Mount Ararat.

Another ascent of Mount Ararat has been made by a party of four Russians—M. Pastuchoff, Captains Griboyedoff and Dragomiroff of the Caucasian general staff and a Cossack officer named Posharski. The party, all mounted, started early in the morning with a couple of servants in charge of the sumpter mules. At an elevation of 9,500 feet the cattle had to be left behind, and the party, proceeding on foot, had reached an altitude of 14,700 feet at sundown. Here they encamped for the night, and on the following morning climbed to the eastern summit of Great Ararat, where a number of scientific observations were taken. The next day the party reached the highest point of the western summit, at an altitude of 16,916 feet, and here also thermometrical and psychrometrical observations were taken, and an analysis made of the glacial covering of the pinnacle. The descent was safely accomplished, and the cattle found in good condition on the lower terrace, where they had been hobbled for three days.—London News.

The Order of Lincoln.

The Order of Lincoln has just been incorporated under the laws of the state of Indiana. Its object is to acquire by purchase or otherwise all kinds of relics relating to Lincoln. A dispatch to the Chicago Record says that Jesse W. Weik of Greencastle, Ind., who has spent years of his life in collecting materials for Herndon and Weik's "Life of Lincoln," has a valuable collection, and he will be one of the principal promoters of the order. Other men who had a personal acquaintance with the martyred president and know where many other valuable relics can be found will join Mr. Weik. If the organization realizes the expectations of its promoters it will soon have a rare collection for a Lincoln museum, including copies of every speech made, document written and apt saying uttered by Mr. Lincoln during his life which are now obtainable.

A Savage's Contempt For Clothing.

The Kaffir's contempt for clothing is the occasion for a nuisance against which the inhabitants of the eastern portion of Cape Colony used often to complain. Now, it seems the people of Buluwayo are suffering from a similar grievance. A few inches of leather flappings girt about his loins satisfy his ideas of everyday dress. The Matabele Times holds that this attire is altogether insufficient and suggests that the sanitary board should take up the subject and prohibit Kaffirs from coming into the town unless they are properly clothed. So does "civilization" slowly make way.—Westminster Gazette.

Lo, the Rich Indian.

It gives people who have not been in the Indian Territory a startlingly new idea of what an Indian chief may be to learn that the chief of the Osages, on learning of the destruction by fire of St. Ann's academy, Kansas, telegraphed the principal to draw on him for $10,000 toward the rebuilding fund. The chiefs in the Indian Territory look, act, talk and make money very much like white men. Like white men, they have kindly recollections of the schools where they were trained in that civilized knowledge which has since been so profitable to them.—Boston Transcript.

THE WORLD KNOWN.

This world that was so vast to dream antique,
With golden realms hard by the break of day,
With virgin seas and wondrous folk that lay
Beyond all snows and storms, to what a spanned
And common thing 'tis shrunk! Who now shall seek
For happy isles along that vulgar way
Which was the ocean sea? Or who shall say
Things yet unlearned of any maiden land?

We know now, know it all, and small the good
To you or me the tedious knowledge brings.
But, oh! if one might stand where Jason stood,
And dream like him of regions strange and fair
Beyond the wild, white sea bird's baths or where
The utmost albatross dips lonely wings!

ART OF HANGING PICTURES.

Oil Paintings Should Not Be Placed In a Room With Engravings.

Only second to importance to producing a fine picture is the fact that the work when completed should be seen to an advantage on the walls where it is placed.

In consulting with a leading decorator on the subject, he said: "In the first place, it may be suggested that it is not desirable to put oil paintings in the same room with engravings or drawings in water colors, crayons or other like materials. It is often done, frequently as a matter of necessity, but we consider it, from a point of artistic taste, a mistake.

"Again, there should be a certain classification of subjects in the pictures ornamenting the walls, as inattention to this is occasionally ludicrous. I recall one instance where there was a print of Rubens' 'Descent From the Cross,' and, hanging on either side of it, engravings of Wilkie's 'Village Festival' and Meissonier's 'Cavalry Charge.' Surely nothing could be more absurd than placing in immediately juxtaposition works in which the motives of the designs are so directly opposite as the illustration of death, a village revel and the fierce shock of battle.

"As a general rule, it is well to place pictures of a certain order of design together. Some works can only be seen to advantage in a bright and others in a subdued light, while it is equally certain that many lose nothing if placed above the line of sight, and others gain rather than lose if hung much nearer the floor.

"A medallion or bas-relief of the right sort set in here or there among the pictures is a relief to the artistic sense, and, above all, all sorts and conditions of frames should not be put together in a hodge podge. Gold and white and gilt do not offend when in close position, but pictures framed in oak or any dark wood should be kept by themselves. Crayon portraits of photographs should never be visible in a parlor or drawing room, and to overcrowd the walls of any room with pictures, good, bad and indifferent, is the very acme of poor taste."—New York Recorder.

The Apology Was Accepted.

"There is a good story on The Examiner," said J. Ross Jackson, the ex-newspaper man, to some friends in the Palace yesterday, "and although I'm out of the business I can't overlook its merit on that account. It appears that a druggist named Putnam was killed in Willows recently by a man named Sehorn. The telegraphed report came to The Call and also to The Chronicle. The next morning, when Managing Editor Hamilton of The Examiner was looking over the record of the day, he discovered that his paper had been 'scooped' on that particular item. He thereupon sent for Mr. Corey, the coast editor of the paper.

"'Mr. Corey,' he said, with a dignified look on his face, 'have we a correspondent in Willows?'

"'Yes.'

"'Did he send in a report of that murder?'

"'No.'

"'Fire him.'

"'How? By mail?'

"'No. By telegraph. We can't dispose of a man like that too quickly. A correspondent who doesn't know that a murder has been committed in his town isn't fit for the position. Bounce him.'

"Mr. Corey went to his record book of correspondents and presently returned to the managing editor.

"'Mr. Hamilton, there are certain circumstances in this man's favor that'—

"'There are no circumstances that would justify such an exhibition of incompetency. Bounce him, I say!'

"'But, Mr. Hamilton, this case has no parallel. That man has a good excuse for overlooking the importance of the story.'

"'Well, what was his excuse?' inquired the editor, becoming nervous.

"'Well,' answered Corey, scratching his chin a moment, 'he was the man who got killed.'

"Mr. Hamilton lapsed into silence and went on reading some proofs."—San Francisco Call.

"Horatio," whispered the heroine, "the villain still pursues us."

"Ha!" exclaimed the lover. "But fear not. Seest thou the ravine that intervenes between us and him?"

"Yes, Horatio—but the bridge. He can cross yon bridge at a bound."

"Fear not, I say. He has got to stop in the middle of the bridge and do a song and dance. Courage!"—Detroit Tribune.

STOCK GAMBLERS' LOGIC.

They Know Brokerage Consumes Their Capital, Yet Persist In Playing.

Two tape traders were sitting in a Wall street office as had been their wont day after day, week after week for three long years. The stock ticker, which records quotations that bring either joy or sorrow to speculators, was momentarily silent. The market at the opening had had a sensational break, but at 11 o'clock the bulls had rallied to its support and had bid up the prices to the former level. The usual lull after sharp breaks and quick rallies prevailed, and operators were trying to gather their thoughts either to guess the direction of the next move or to meditate on what profits they might have made in the last changes had they followed the move in each direction.

"George," remarked one of the traders, "you're a bear, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Been a bear nine days out of ten, haven't you?"

"Yes, I believe I have. What of it?"

"Well, George, have you made any money in the market?" continued the speaker in sorrowful tones.

"No, Jack, I'm behind many thousands, but, by the way, you've been a bull nine days out of every ten, and how much money have you made?" was the taunting reply.

A dejected look mixed up with a sickly smile came to the trader's face as he was asked this question, and after a few moments' hesitation he said, "To tell the truth, George, I, too, am a heavy loser."

"Well, then, Jack, who got all the"—

"One hundred Paul at 74¼—Sugar is five-eighths," shouted the office boy, as the sharp click of the ticker printed the quotations.

"Buy me 100 Paul at the market," was one trader's order.

"Sell me 200 Sugar at three-quarters," was the other's.

The broker soon telephoned from the floor of the exchange that the orders had been executed, and his bookkeeper made a credit to brokerage account of $75 of the traders' money. Thus it is that in playing stocks, as in all gambling, the house slowly but surely gets the player's "pile."—New York Press.

A VERSATILE SPECIALIST.

There Was More Sarcasm Than Honor In the Toastmaster's Introduction.

A certain local physician of pompous bearing and vast pretense as to ethical observance journeyed forth very recently from his office on Broadway to attend a gathering at Chicago of a society of specialists.

The Cincinnati doctor was not a member of this society, but was not a bit reticent on this account. He is noted for his constant attendance upon the sessions of specialists of every class, wherever convened, and several months ago succeeded in stirring up quite a teapot tempest in a St. Louis gathering.

So to Chicago he went. Presenting himself at the hall, he was accorded by courtesy the privilege of sitting in the meetings. At once he began vigorously, yet stealthily and systematically, "knocking" a member of the society who hails from Cincinnati. The resentment of the brethren against these tactics was general, and their revenge came at a dinner at the exclusive Chicago club, with which the proceedings closed.

The "outsider" from Cincinnati had been set down for a toast, and he had spent much time and care in formulating his supposably impromptu remarks. The suave toastmaster, rising benignly in his place, announced the speaker in a fashion that entirely upset the calculations of the aspiring medicus and made him at once and forever the laughing stock of the society.

"Gentlemen," announced the toastmaster in his most insinuating tone, "I have now the pleasure and honor of presenting to you a gentleman of our profession who is not only able, but strikingly versatile. I beg to introduce Dr. B. Blink Blank of Cincinnati, who is widely known as a specialist in every known branch of medicine and surgery!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Gossip.

How frequently is the honesty and integrity of man disposed of by a smile or a shrug! How many good and generous actions have been shrunk into oblivion by a distrustful look or stamped with the imputation of proceeding from bad motives, by a mysterious and seasonable whisper! Look into companies of those whose gentle natures should disarm them, we shall find no better account. How often does the reputation of a helpless creature bleed by a report—which the party who is at the pains to propogate it beholds with much pity and fellow feeling—that she is heartily sorry for it—hopes in God it is not true—however, as Archbishop Tillotson wittily observes upon it, is resolved in the meantime to give the report her pass, that at least it may have fair play to take its fortune in the world to be believed or not, according to the charity of those into whose hands it shall happen to fall.—Addison.

Stepniak on Russia's Czar.

In an interview with Stepniak, a report of which appears in Great Thoughts, he was asked his opinion of the new czar. "There was a time," he replied, "when Russian Liberals cherished a hope—I may say, indeed, a considerable degree of hope—but the new czar has disappointed every expectation of the most moderate among our progressive parties. He has shown himself utterly incapable of departing from the traditions of his predecessor, and will continue to play the ungrateful part of official screen to bureaucratic tyranny."—Westminster Gazette.

FORECASTERS.

Some people are so influenced by the electric currents of the atmosphere that they can foretell the coming of a thunderstorm with perfect accuracy, and others there are with nerves so sensitive that they are sure of having neuralgia from a low and fretful state of the nervous system. Now, why can't the latter be warned in time and know that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. To use St. Jacob's Oil promptly will ward off an attack, or if attacked, will promptly cure. Such people can do for themselves what others do from weather prophecies. Heed the signals and save the wreck and disaster.

FIRE! FIRE! THAT DREADFUL CRY

Is fraught with import doubly dire to the unhappy man who beholds his dwelling or his warehouse feeding the devouring element uninsured. Happily most people who can, insure—everything but health. Nine tenths of us neglect the preservation of this when it is in palpable jeopardy. Incipient indigestion, liver complaint, la grippe, inaction of the kidneys and bladder and malaria are all counteracted by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be take out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Passion For Gossip.

The Morning Post will publish an inspired paragraph about your wedding or your death for the sum of 1 guinea, but would not for 20 guineas describe your personal appearance, tell an eager world how, when and where you made the acquaintance of your wife, divulge the secret of your exact income, or, in a word, make any mention at all of your private affairs. But there are a vast number of people who like nothing better than reading about their private affairs in print and are not unwilling to pay for their pleasure. It has occurred to a clever exploiter of the weaknesses of his kind to start a newspaper for the benefit of these gentle egotists, and it is to be hoped that his faith in human folly will not go unrewarded.

The paper is to be published weekly. Subscribers of 5 guineas a year will have a right to one paragraph, written by themselves if so desired, in each issue; subscribers of 8 guineas to two. It is to be sent gratis to every morning and evening journal, and to over 500 weekly ones, many of which will, no doubt, fill out their columns with extracts from it. Henceforth if the world continues to know nothing of its greatest men it will be entirely the fault of the great men themselves. The possibilities of such a paper are immense. I cannot conceive a more welcome birthday present to a niece or sister than a receipt in her name for a year's subscription. The labor of writing 52 paragraphs about herself would physic a great deal of pain and keep her out of no end of mischief in the course of the 12 months.—London Realm.

Lodging In a Rope House.

The latest addition to the curiosities of the city is what Secretary Saunders of the election commission calls a rope house. It is a combination saloon and hotel at the Levee and Spruce street, kept by a man named Peterson.

Across the room the proprietor has a rope stretched tightly, and in front of it and parallel with it is a row of ordinary wooden bottom chairs. Every lodger, upon payment of 5 cents, is given a chair and is allowed to sleep with his head resting upon the rope. They are allowed to sleep until 6 o'clock in the morning. Promptly at that time the bartender is required to see that every lodger is awakened and made to move on.

This is accomplished by striking one end of the rope with a bung starter. The blows have pretty much the same effect as striking the sleeping boarders on the head with a billy, and they generally move on.

If this fails one end of the rope is unfastened and the remaining sleepers are allowed to fall sprawling on the floor.—St. Louis Letter.

CONSUMPTION CURED

AN ABSOLUTE REMEDY FOR ALL PULMONARY COMPLAINTS.

T. A. Slocum Offers to Send Two Bottles Free of His Remedy to Cure Consumption and All Lung Troubles—An Elixir of Life.

Nothing could be fairer, more philanthropic or carry more joy in its wake than the offer of T. A. Slocum, M. C., of 183 Pearl street, New York. Perfectly confident that he has an absolute remedy for the cure of consumption and all pulmonary complaints, he offers through this paper to send two bottles free to any reader who is suffering from lung trouble or consumption, also loss of flesh and all conditions of wasting. He invites those desirous of obtaining this remedy to send their express and postoffice address, and to receive in return the two bottles free, which will arrest the approach of death. Already this remedy, by its timely use, has permanently cured thousands of cases which were given up, and death was looked upon as an early visitor.

Knowing his remedy as he does, and being so proof-positive of its beneficent results, Dr. Slocum considers it his religious duty, a duty which he owes to humanity, to donate his infallible remedy where it will assault the enemy in its citadel, and, by its inherent potency, stay the current of dissolution, bringing joy to homes over which the shadow of the grave has been gradually growing more strongly defined, causing fond hearts to grieve. The cheapness of the remedy—offered freely—apart from its inherent strength, is enough to commend it, and more so is the perfect confidence of the great chemist making the offer, who holds out life to those already becoming emaciated, and says: "Be cured."

The invitation is certainly worthy of the consideration of the afflicted, who, for years, have been taking nauseous nostrums without effect; who have ostracised themselves from home and friends to live in more salubrious climes, where the atmosphere is more congenial to weakened lungs, and who have fought against death with all the weapons and strength in their hands. There will be no mistake in sending for these free bottles—the mistake will be in passing the invitation by.
