IF WAR MUST BE,

By All Means Let It Be With Britain, the Bully of the World.

Louiseville Courier-Journal.

There will be no back-down on the part of the United States. The principle of American independence of monarchical aggression is one which will be maintained as long as the republic of the United States exists. Salisbury may bluster that it is a principle which is not accepted among the laws of nations. That is a question which is not worth an argument. It is a principle proclaimed as a law of this nation, which stands ready to enforce its acceptance by any nation that dares attempt to violate it. If the government which Salisbury represents wishes to try that issue, it can certainly have its wish by persisting in its present course should our commission find that British claims in Venezuela are unjust.

And if it is necessary at this late day to go to war to vindicate the Monroe doctrine, by all means let that war be with Great Britain. Such a war would settle more things than the Monroe doctrine. It would sweep this grasping power off this continent, as it is bound to be swept sooner or later. It would administer a drubbing to the bully of the world of which he is sadly in need, and it would give other nations which have suffered so much at his brutal and sordid hands a chance to even up the blackest score that blot history's record of power and lust.

But aside from all this—aside from the irresistible spirit with which our people would rise up to repel an assault upon the vital principle of American institutions; aside from the conclusive character of the settlement of all question at issue in a war with an antagonist so formidable as Great Britain—the people of the United States, if they are to have a war, would rather fight with Great Britain than any other power. She is our historic and irreconcilable enemy. She has never forgiven us for asserting our independence of her greedy domination. She is still sore from the lickings we have given her. She is, more than all other nations, envious of our growth and resentful of our rivalry. She is the most arrogant in her patronage, the most offensive in her criticism. Moreover, she is the most odious to Americans everywhere as the one great "civilized" government that has built up its power and heaped up its riches by trampling under foot those principles of humanity and liberty dearest to the American heart. Bully, braggart, freebooter, she feeds upon the weak, as the ravenous brute she has chosen as her emblem, and her vast dominion today is the most shameful monument to the supremacy of might over right. The rank and file of the people of this country would rather thrash the devil out of Great Britain than any other nation, because they believe there is more of the devil in Great Britain than in any other nation.

Speaking for one part of the country—the people of the Southern states—the Courier-Journal is free to say that they would flock to the flag that flung defiance to John Bull, as they never flocked to their own stars and bars. With all the impetuous ardor of their nature, they would welcome such a war and ask no better boon than the privilege of fighting in it. And the Monroe doctrine, and everything else that would be at stake in a war with England, would be safe under the defense of the men of the South.

Nevertheless, the Courier-Journal does not believe there is going to be any war. The president's message, impregnable in its position, fearless in its assertion, unlimited in its support, is the strongest assurance, not of war, but of peace. John Bull knows when he meets a foe man, "his size," and he is not going about picking quarrels with that sort of belligerents. A good deal has been said in Europe about our lack of a navy. Yet Europe must remember that we can build a navy if we want to do so. If Uncle Sam chooses to spend a thousand million dollars on a navy and build the biggest in the world he can do so. He could borrow the money in a week, and even then his public debt would be only a little over half as large as that of Great Britain. Only we are a peace loving nation and do not care to build such a navy. But our critics must not forget that we always have the ability to do it. In the ability of our men to march and to fight we have the same confidence. They have proved it often enough.

James W. Smith handles sugar in our lot direct from the refinery. His prices defy competition.

An important decision has recently been rendered by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Irwin, which is of especial interest to rural school districts. In a letter to the superintendent of Lincoln county's schools he holds that a school district does not lose its organization by reason of its failure to have at least three months' school each school year, but simply loses its apportionments of state and county money. Should a district fail to have school for a number of years, and then by private means raise funds and have the necessary three months' school, the district would be entitled to its apportionment of state and county money thereafter. It would seem in the light of this decision that there is no way for a school district to lose its autonomy unless it be attached to some other district. A voluntary failure to elect officers or to have the three months' school each year does not affect the organization.

The days of great emigration to the west is over. The tide is flowing south. People who are in search of homes are going south. Thousands who have been battling with the cold of the Dakotas are now seeking a more equable climate, and Alabama seems to be the choice at present. The West must exert itself, if the homeseekers are to be attracted.

The N. Y. Tribune says that our 10,000,000 fighting men, regardless of their domestic political opinions, stand ready to back up President Cleveland's notice to Great Britain and the world that the Monroe doctrine cannot be violated without first whipping the United States.

If Turkey should be wiped out, it would mean the loss to Russia of an annual sum of $7,500,000, which Turkey pays her by way of indemnity, and will have to pay till 1977.

Geo. W. Jenkins, editor of the Santa Maria "Times," Cal., in speaking of the various ailments of children said: When my children have croup there is only one patent medicine that I ever use, and that is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It possesses some medicinal properties that relieve the little sufferers immediately. It is, in my opinion, the best cough medicine in the market. If this remedy is freely given as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving it to children, as it contains nothing injurious.
