

THE GCONDON GLOBE.

THE OFFICIAL PAPER OF GILLIAM COUNTY, OREGON.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17, 1896.

WAR A CIVILIZER.

The tendency of all civilized nations during the past few decades has been toward encouraging peace and settle international disputes by arbitration; but the tendency has not yet met with universal approval. It is urged that war is the great civilizing agent; that it invites noble deeds; draws people closer together; creates a love of country; encourages advancement in science and art, and prevents a people from relaxing into a state of effeminacy. Judging from the history of nations, it would seem that there is foundation for this belief. Greece and Rome were most prosperous and made the most rapid strides in advancement while their people were aggressive and warlike. The later European nations made more rapid advancement when engaged in foreign wars than they have during the times of peace. America is no exception to the rule, and there are many today who urge that war with some foreign power would be more beneficial than detrimental. Among those who hold this view is W. H. Henrichsen, secretary of state of Illinois. In a recent interview regarding the possibility of a war with England, he said:

"I don't know much about the question in dispute, but I have always thought our country ought to assert herself as the protector of all the American republics against European aggression. For thirty years our foreign policy has been pusillanimous, and the only protection an American had abroad was by claiming to be an Englishman. Whatever may be Cleveland's motive in assuming his position, I think he is right, and the great mass of the people, while caring little about the particular point in dispute, will sustain him. A war with England would be a very good thing. Our country needs a war about once every generation. It serves to keep alive and intensify the American spirit, opens a field for the expenditure of a good deal of surplus energy, enthusiasm and patriotism; gives employment to a large number of people who would rather fight than work, and deadens the bitterness between political parties. Of the thousands of foreigners who land on our shores every year a large proportion settle in communities by themselves, retaining their national customs, habits and prejudices. They are in many respects foreigners always. A war requiring the services of a large number of men would draw many into the army. A year of fighting and marching under the American flag and in support of American institutions would do more to Americanize these people than 20 years of peaceful residence, isolated from the American populace. A war with England would teach us to depend upon ourselves instead of upon English bankers for a financial system. It would prove the death of Anglo-maniacs of this country; would paralyze the A. P. A.; would put an end to all foreign-American political societies, and would in short, Americanize the American people."

*John W. Lewis, a former register of the Dalles land office, hits the nail on the head as follows: The men who wore the gray remember, and have taught their sons to know and remember too, that it was England who encouraged them to rebel; England's promises of assistance on which they relied, and that it was England who failed them in the hour of need. I not only believe in the Monroe doctrine as generally understood, but I believe also in its expansion. This government should never rest on that subject until every foot of land in both North and South America is forever freed from ownership or occupancy by any power not American.

The supreme court of Washington has issued an order restraining the county judge, auditor, clerk and sheriff of Pierce county from calling a jury to try criminal cases awaiting trial. The reason is that the county being beyond the legal debt limit cannot create new obligations. This may result in a general jail delivery, as the state law says the prisoners must be tried within 60 days after filing information against them.

As a matter of fact, the English position in Venezuela is growing weaker and weaker every day. There is accumulating evidence that they have put forward an arrogant and unjust claim. One of the leading London papers, the Chronicle, has already thrown up the sponge and admits that England is claiming a position to which she has no title.—N. Y. World.
