"THE MULTITUDE."
President McKinley has proven himself to be a master of the situation. He has not given up the nation to the holders of Cuban bonds. Neither has he listened to the jingoist who has been howling war to please the multitude.

Who make up "the multitude," in these United States, neighbor? Is it not composed of the rank and file of the nation, the plain, common people of the republic, who have never been known to shirk duty when the honor or integrity of their country was in danger? Was it not "the multitude" who made William McKinley what he is today, the chief executive of a nation of 70,000,000 of people? Was it not "the multitude" who rallied round the flag when Sumpter was first fired upon and who willingly shed their life blood that the Union might be preserved? Was it not "the multitude," armed with flintlocks and pitchforks, who arose in their might and wrested the thirteen colonies from British rule and British tyranny, and who established this great republic, of which we are all so proud, and which we all so dearly love to designate as "the land of the free and the home of the brave," on Fourth of July occasions and in campaign speeches—and editorials—just before election?

We are not criticizing President McKinley. He today is in need of the earnest, physical and moral support of every American, perhaps more so than any man in this nation has been, since Lincoln's inauguration in the dark days of '61, but we do resent the habit, which is becoming so fashionable, in certain circles, and among a certain class of newspapers, in these fin de siècle days, of characterizing the great body of the American people, even by implication, as a clamorous multitude of jingoists, etc., who know not what they want and whose opinion on any question is not worthy the consideration of public officials, newspaper editors and other great men.

The fact is that the masses of the American people come nearer knowing, in nine cases out of ten, what they want, what the country needs and what justice and honor and right demand, than do the learned statesmen who have been employed by their masters, the people, to look after the details and routine work of the governing business.

This fact has been forcibly demonstrated in the Cuban matter. For more than two years "the multitude" has held that the Cuban patriots, who have been making such a heroic struggle for liberty, were entitled to recognition from this government. For more than two years they have stood ready to support any action which the government might take having for its object the freedom of Cuba and the expulsion of the Spaniards from the western hemisphere. The learned statesmen, who, by virtue of power vested in them by "the multitude," have direct charge of the affairs of state, saw fit, for divers reasons, to ignore the wishes of the common people in this matter and to adopt a policy of procrastination and delay, and the result has been that, after the loss of our finest battle-ship and 266 American sailors, the country has at last been forced into the very position that "the multitude" believed it should take two years ago. Perhaps had the government been pleased to please "the multitude" in the matter of recognizing the belligerency of Cuba, the Maine would still be flying the stars and stripes and her bonny sailor boys would be alive today.

It is "the multitude" who made America today.

Every American who loves the flag and hates the oppressor is a sovereign, and we are one of those who still believe that the destinies of the republic will ever be safe in their hands.

It has become necessary to have the floor joists under the clerk's office strengthened, the floor having become so weak that there is danger of the heavy safe breaking through. The present building in which the business of Gilliam county is transacted is entirely inadequate, and the sooner the people demand and insist upon a new court house the better for the entire county. It is no more true economy for the county to try to "get along" in its present quarters than it would be for a man with a family of 14 children to continue to live in a 10x12 "shack" simply to save the expense of building a new house.

Our national game, base ball, bids fair to be superseded by an international game of cannon ball this season.

$50 Reward.
I will pay the above reward for the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who stole a four-month-old calf from my pasture, near Condon, on or about the night of the 21st of April, 1898.
