They will be gone about one month.

The county court decided to allow the clerk and sheriff deputy hire for this year, the former receiving $800, and the latter $500 for that purpose. This action was right. The work of neither office can be properly done without a deputy, and it is right and proper that the county should pay reasonably for such services. No county can afford to have its work poorly done or its officers overworked.

Oie Patterson, of the Hopper Gazette, and Jas. H. McKibben, of the Portland Senator, brightened our sanctum for a few moments last Saturday with their presence. Mr. Patterson is making a tour of the interior towns visiting officially the different K. of P. lodges, being Grand Chancellor of that order in this state, while Mr. McKibben, whose paper is the K. P. organ in Oregon, is with him for the pleasure of the trip and to meet the brothers of the various lodges. The gentlemen are both all right newspaper men, of the kind who will always receive the glad hand at the Globe office. Call again, gentlemen.

John Linn Murdered.

The people of this vicinity were shocked, on Thursday of last week, by reading in the Oregonian an account of the murder of John Linn at Alder Springs, near the summit of the Cascade mountains, on the 15th of June, the murder being committed by Claude Branton. Following is the Oregonian's account of the crime:

"Eugene Ore., July 5.—Officers here have just learned of a murder at Alder Springs, 80 miles west of Eugene, on the McKibbin river, June 15. Conductor Green and Claude Branton were coming across the mountains with John Linn, of Condon, with a band of horses. Linn and Branton had trouble over a settlement while camped at Squaw creek, Crook county. They arrived at Alder Springs June 15, and corralled their horses. Linn lay down by the fire, Green says soon after, while he was getting wood, he heard the report of a pistol. He looked around, he says, and saw Branton standing over Linn with a smoking revolver. Linn was shot through the head. Green says he does not know what was done with the body, as he and Branton went to Walteville the next day. Branton told a friend there of the shooting of Linn. Officers were later informed, and are now searching for Branton. Deputy Prosecuting Harris Conover, Clatsop, left for Alder Springs tonight. Linn was about 60 years of age. Branton and Green are young men."

The Eugene Register gives a more detailed account of the murder which is confirmatory of the report given above. It seems that Green was frightened by the cold blooded deed, and was so much afraid of Branton that he did not speak of the murder to any one until the story leaked out, after their arrival at Walteville. From remarks made by Branton himself, Green then told the story to his uncle, who at once started him to Eugene to notify the proper officers. Branton left the horses at Seavey's place, near Walteville, in a pasture, and came back across the mountains to Prineville. Later he returned to the Valley, visited an uncle at Pleasant Hill, and the last seen of him was on the night of July 31, at Orwells, Lane county, where he was waiting for a train, presumably with the intention of going to California. He had declared his intention of enlisting in the army, and all officers are especially requested to watch recruiting stations for him.

A late report in the Evening Telegram states that officers who were searching for Linn's body found only the bones and a few torn remnants of his clothing. Linn was well known in this section, having been a resident here for 12 or 13 years. He was of economical habits and had accumulated considerable money and also owned a band of horses that he worked for different farmers and stockmen in this section and was accounted a good hand, but of a somewhat peculiar disposition. He was about 45 years of age. Branton came here last fall from Walteville, Lane county, with his mother, and the family resided here during the winter. Mrs. Branton secured a divorce from her husband at the April term of court, here, and it is rumored around town that Linn was a suitor for Mrs. Branton's hand, and one story was circulated that after the party left Condon in June, Linn and Mrs. Branton left the others and went to Washington and were married. This story lacks confirmation, however, and is given for what it is worth.

Young Green also came here from the Walteville country and worked for Pat Skelly during the spring. The three men, Linn, Branton and Green, left here on the 5th day of June with a band of Linn's horses for the Valley, and Mrs. Branton left at about the same time. Linn was a member of Condon Camp Woodmen of the World, and carried a $3000 policy on his life in that order, drawn in favor of his legal heirs. He had no known relatives on this coast, but is supposed to have a sister living either at Galesburg or Alberton, Ill. Linn made his home with the family of John Palmer, of Ferry Canyon west of the time for the last 16 years. Ed. Palmer, who perhaps knew as much of Linn's business as any man in the country, informed the Globe that Linn took his trunk, which contained all his papers, letters, etc., with him or rather, sent it in the wagon in which Mrs. Branton went. He was moving his horses across the mountains for a better range and had arranged with Claude Branton to run the band on shares. He had $1500 due him on July 1st as he had promised Ed. Palmer to let him have that sum on that date to invest in cattle. He expected to return to Palmer's about the first of the month and spend the Fourth there. Ed. thinks he had perhaps $125 with him when he left here.

Late advices from Eugene addressed to P. H. Stephenson, in response to inquiries made by him, are to the effect that the coroner and prosecuting attorney have returned from Alder Springs after holding an inquest over all that remained of the body of John Linn. The body had been cremated in the camp-fire and so carefully had the fiendish butcher accomplished his horrible task all that could be recovered by the officers was a few charred bones, buttons and suspenders. A section of the skull, portion of lower jaw, toe joint and some teeth are all that can be positively identified as having belonged to a human being. The suspenders buckles found are of rather large size and bear the word "GLADIATOR" on middle bar. An ax, found beside the camp-fire, stained with blood, had evidently been used by the murderer to chop the body of his victim into small pieces to facilitate the work of cremation.

Taken together it was one of the most cold blooded and atrocious crimes ever perpetrated in the state.

LATER, Courtland Green has been arrested at Eugene as an accessory to the murder of Linn, and placed under $7,500 bond to appear before the grand jury. He is in jail. Branton is still at large. An officer has gone to San Francisco to look for him.

Antelope Wiped Out.

Our neighboring town of Antelope, in Wasco county, was almost totally destroyed by fire last Sunday night. The fire originated in Condon's looking-alike from a lamp explosion. Every business house in the town was burned with the exception of Irving's store, Dickson's livery stable and the Eskela hotel. Loss estimated at $80,000, insurance $25,000. The town council has been holding a session discussing the water works question but have failed to do anything and when the fire came the town was unprepared. Condon should learn a lesson from the misfortune of her neighbor.

Charley Wester has returned from the Valley, where he has been with a couple of carloads of horses. He seems to be well pleased with the sales, though he may have fallen off some in flesh, as he doesn't look as though he weighed much over three hundred pounds now.

We understand that one of our popular young ladies was obliged to flee to the mountains on account of too much attention from the young men. Blobs, you ought to be ashamed of yourselves. We admit she is a heartbreaker, yet you ought to allow her the pleasure of her own company for at least a part of the time.

David Bowman, our blacksmith, tells us that George Welshon has fallen heir to a steam engine, and that he is thinking of getting it down to get in partnership with him in the blacksmith business. David proposes putting the steam engine in the shop, get a steel turning lathe, and turn out horse-shoe nails, square harrow teeth, etc., and David thinks eventually he can turn George into a father-in-law.

Valuable Canines.

Ed Dunn received a consignment of valuable canines, all the way from "old Missouri," one day last week, and since that time has been buying his beef-steak etc. in job lots. The animals are of the hound variety, and that they are thoroughbred lawdies by their wealth of ears, voice and appetite. The shipment consisted of an entire family, pater, mater and two small puppies, but one of the latter succumbed to the discomfords of the long journey, change of climate, etc., and, shortly after his arrival, turned up his little toes and passed on to that place to which all good little dogs are supposed to finally emigrate. The outfit cost about $100 laid down here, exclusive of medical attendance and funeral expenses for the little one that "so quickly passed away," but they are considered cheap dogs at that price. They were imported for the purpose of making the coyotes, which are so numerous on the sheep ranges, hard to catch, and it is believed that one well directed hound fired into a pack of these troublesome brutes will frighten out of the country all that are not annihilated on the spot. They are built on a plan similar to the 13-inch rifles with which the battleship Oregon is armed, only of smaller caliber, and throw an explosive, cigar-shaped projectile, composed of solid wood which will do deadly execution at a distance of eight and one-half miles. Mr. Dunn wishes to have it understood that he is not the owner of the dogs, but is only acting as receiving agent for his brother Jip, Ed McKinney and Bob Brown, who ordered them and who, he says, are really the guilty parties. It is considered somewhat strange that it was possible to find a man in Missouri who was willing to part with so many dogs at one time.

Some War Stories.

War stories are in order, so we will tell one about an old country-man who came into a small town in Arkansas about a week or two ago. He lived in the woods, and his last visit to town had been made at the close of the Civil War. The little country place was then full of soldiers, and now after thirty years the first thing the old man saw was a militia company marching to the depot on their way to the encampment. He looked in amazement and muttered audibly: "By God, them darned liars told me Lee had surrendered, an' here's that dratted war still a-goin' on!"—Ex

"And did you see Elgah in camp?" "And what was he doing?" "Frying bacon." "What! Elgah? And didn't you see him doing anything else?" "Yes saw him holding an officer's horse." "Nothing else?" "I believe I saw him keeping the flies off a mule." "Dear, dear! Isn't war just horrid?"—Cleveland Plaindealer.
