A Kansas man has discovered the reason that an engine called her, and his argument is that they wear a jacket, and aprons, have shoes, hose and drag a train behind them; they have a lap, need goggles, ride wheels, will not turn out for pedestrians, sometimes foam and refuse to work, they attract men, are very contrary and it always takes a man to manage them.—Ex.

She was a Sunday school teacher, and, of course, she tried to make everything good. She spied a lot ofurchins going bathing one Sunday afternoon, and so she tackled them. "Do you know where little boys go when they bathe on Sunday?" said she. "Yes," said one little Arab, blacker than all the rest. "It's further up the canal side; but you can't go; girls ain't allowed."—Ex.

Two of our young men had a disagreement Saturday evening and decided to go outside the city limits and fight it out. Most of the male population followed to see the fun, but after the battle was over a mile or so into the country, a motion to reconsider was adopted, and the fight was declared off. The crowd was disappointed and so was the undertaker who confidently expected to make a sale of two coffins before bed time. Al says it is not fair to treat a man that way.

H. B. Hendricks has a horror of baldness, and having heard that sunshine copiously applied to a scalp afflicted or threatened with that malady would prevent or cure it, but being a bit timid of experiments, conceived the brilliant idea of inducing some of his friends to try the remedy to learn if it would prove fatal before tackling it himself. S. V. Palmer and Randle Palmer (no relation) were the victims selected for his scheme.

After listening to a half-hour talk from the attorney, in favor of the recipe, these gentlemen hastened to have their few remaining locks removed by the sandpaper process, to give the snubnoses a fair show, and then cut the crowns out of their hats. They are full of enthusiasm now and do their looting in the sun, and Syl is hunting an article to have a splinter painted on his occiput to keep the flies off. When the blisters begin to rise, however, it is feared there will be trouble, and if H. B. is as wise as he looks he will take his summer outing, about that time, away out in the mountains.

Claude Branton Captured.

Eugene Register, July 20th.

Claude Branton, the supposed murderer of John Linn, is now safely lodged in the county jail.

He came to town today and was recognized by Bert Finn, who knew him well, and later by Roy Sutton, who ran out through the back way across the court house and told Deputy Sheriff Day that the man he wanted was walking the streets.

Meanwhile Bert Finn had left Branton and was hunting George Crocker to tell him his find, but before they could return, Day had followed Branton down as far as the Baptist church, corner of 8th and Pearl streets, and covering him, ordered him to throw up his hands, which he did without resistance. When arrested, nothing was found upon Branton in the shape of a dangerous weapon, only a pocket knife being secured.

It may be evident that Branton returned to Eugene for the purpose of surrendering, as he arrived on the afternoon train, and was taken to the jail.

Mr. H. S. Finn, a young man and schoolmate of Branton, says that while walking up Willamette street this afternoon he overtook Branton and instantly recognizing him slapped him on the back and said "Hello, Claude, I am surprised to see you here." Branton seemed very cool and unconcerned. A conversation followed in which Branton seemed surprised upon hearing of Green's arrest and of the $250 reward.

He asked Finn not to report on him, as he desired to go home first. The two separated near the new court house corner, Branton going east on Eighth street, while Finn and Conrathland Green, who is held as an accomplice, met in the jail. Branton exclaimed "Hello, Conrathland, I did not expect to find you here," and Green replied that he was also surprised.

Branton made no resistance whatever when Deputy Day took him. He protested against the issuance of a criminal warrant, of any reward offered, or that he was under any suspicion.

The officers are very reticent and refuse to talk much about the present status of the case, but it is rumored that he has had another story which places him more in an unenviable position, and that implicates a third person whom the officers have watched from the first.

Branton claims that he went back to Topeka, Kansas, where he went in quest of a job, but when he reached there he found that they were only paying $1.00 per day for sack sewing, and he bought a ticket for Portland and returned. He says he tried to buy a ticket back to Eugene but could not do so. When arrested he had $42.31 on his person.

The officers seem inclined to believe this part of Branton's story and think that he will yet either confess or give himself away. His complaints of hunger when being questioned in his cage and said he would talk more after he had had something to eat.

Can't Get Along Without It. HUNTINGTON, OR., July 22, '98.

EDITOR GLOBE:—Please forward my Globe to Huntington, as my wife and I are here for the summer, and I can't get along without the weekly visit of the Globe.

I came here to look after some mining property that I own here. The prospect seems good for plenty of gold, and we will soon be busy for digging it out. This is the greatest fruit county I ever saw. My brother and partner, James Heady, shipped 30 tons of peaches to Butte, Montana, last year, and their crop is still larger this year. The shipping season has just begun for this year's fruit crop. They shipped 150 boxes of cherries this year. Yours,

L. G. EDELMAN.

Tom Johnson's haying crew were engaged stacking hay near town the other morning and, after having put several loads on the stack, George Neale, the stacker, was somewhat startled to see a man's form wriggling and squirming up out of the center of the stack. He was as white as a sheet and pretty well suffocated. The fellow was a stranger and had crawled into the hay to sleep and had not awakened until about three feet of hay had been placed on top of him. He said if he had slept awhile longer he would not have been able to get out at all. Had such been the case, Condon would have been furnished with a first-class sensation next winter when that stack was opened.

ARLINGTON.

Prof. Kerby has gone to Troutdale.

Several carloads of nules were shipped from here last week. They go to the Klondike country.

Ten carpenters are kept busy here all the time. Arlington, considering its size, is a lively town in Oregon.

The Arlington Drug Co.'s new store is nearing completion. It will be one of the finest store buildings in the city.

The old Vance building has been remodeled and a glass front put in. Walt Compton will soon start a notion store in the building.

The new steam ferryboat is nearing completion. When done, it will be able to cross the river at any time, regardless of the wind.

Harvest hands are hard to get just now, but still the tramp shows up every day dead broke and begging for grub, and swears there is no work.

Plenty of vegetables of all kinds are being peddled in Arlington at present. Melon men will soon be here, and the crop promises to be a good one.

A. Smythe started Monday for Baker City, where he has a trainload of sheep awaiting shipment. The sheep were purchased in the John Day valley.

Frank Sweeney and family left last Thursday for their home at Warranton, having been on a visit with Mrs. Sweeney's mother, W. H. Colwell, for the past several months.

Robert Walker, the old man who lives four miles south of town, started with his pack horses last Monday for the Klondike to try his luck at mining. He owns considerable property in this section of country.

Several headers have gone out within the last few days, and several threshing machines, one a steam thresher belonging to G. S. South. He has 100,000 bushels engaged to thresh in the Shattler flat and Eightmile sections.

Every house in Arlington is occupied, and more could be rented if they were to be had. There will be a scarcity of houses to town this fall when school begins, as there are many families that intend to come here to take advantage of our excellent school facilities.

Several rattlesnakes have been killed on Rock creek the past week.

Miss Effa Backus has returned to Gilliam and is staying with her sister, Mrs. G. S. South.

The wheat in this section is turning out better than was expected. The spring and volunteer will both make a good quality of wheat.

C. A. Wakeley, a one-legged, spectacle wearer, was exhibiting some of the burned bones of John Linn, who was murdered on the McKinnis by Branton.

Wood will be cut at the head of Rock creek this winter and floated down next spring to Olex for the grist mill and other uses that want to join in and go up and cut and put in the creek at that point.

B. F. Yarnett, of Ellensburg, has just made a dash with J. A. Crum, and a new set of machinery and roller process will be put in the Olex mill. Ware houses will be erected, and a first-class mill will hereafter be at Olex. This mill can be run cheaper than at any other point in the county, as we have plenty of water the most of the time.

CLEM.

John Wasson is heading his grain near Clem this week.

Mrs. Martin, of Rock creek, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Grant Wade.

Jud McGinire passed through Clem Friday, assisting in driving a band of mules.

Mrs. Conroy, her daughter and Miss Beagle are down from the mountains on a visit.

H. T. Probst recently purchased a new header, and has begun work with the same.

Geo. Welshons last week purchased a new Ester organ from the Jacobson Music Co., of The Dalles.

Coyotes have been catching Danneman's chickens of late, and Gus has been setting steeltraps to catch the pesky brotes. The first night he put out traps he caught two chickens and a cat; the next night, a couple of toughs, Gus has hading hay for him, took an old coyote hide and placed it in a position to look like the genuine article in the trap. Before retiring Gus thought he would visit his traps, and in the dim, uncertain light he thought he had trapped a coyote for sure; so he said "Ah, we have you at last, ha ha ha!" Got to make sure he concluded to kill the brute before taking him out of the trap, so he got a rock and hit his dry, harness-old hide a terrible blow, and the rattle of the dry hide also rattled Gus. He at first thought the animal's hide didn't exactly fit him, then the thought struck him that perhaps this campaign liquor, together with Boyer's cherries, might be having a bad effect on him; then he pinched himself to see whether he might be dreaming, but he seemed to be awake, and concluded to take another whack at the rattle-skinned brute, and picked up a rock and let drive at the supposed coyote; it was then that those bad men, who had been hiding near by, gave the horse laugh, and the situation began to dawn on Gus with all its disappointments, and, after prying the tin tag off a plug of saw-log tobacco and taking a chew of the weed to steady his nerve, he sneaked off to bed, but he hasn't heard the last of it yet, and coyote talk is getting monotonous with Gus.

LONE ROCK.

J. B. Goff made a business trip to Fossil last Monday.

J. R. Bennett was reported as being seriously ill last week.

The weather has turned quite warm the past few days.

Haying has been the order of the day in this locality for the past few weeks.

John M. Brown made a trip to Heppner with a four-horse team the first of the week.

Miss Annie Wineland is assisting Mrs. F. B. Stevens in household work for a few weeks.

Ed Wineland will soon commence the construction of his big new livery and feed stable.

D. Z. Robinson has sold his Lone Rock & Condon mail route to Henry Neel, who took charge of same last Monday.

This burg will soon have a telephone line which will connect with the line at Malloy's mill, which is about 12 miles east of here.

The road has been lined with emigrants the past few weeks. There seems to be about an equal number traveling each way—north and south.

W. A. Gos-twin commenced work on the new M. E. church, building at this place last Tuesday. He expects to have it completed in about six weeks.

Miss Flora Ward went over to Eight-mile Monday, where she has employment in the family of Mr. P. Brenner through the harvest season.

J. R. Ralston & Son have put up a neat new sign on their store. It would be a good thing for the town if other business houses could follow suit.

The camp meeting which was in progress for about two weeks over on Rock creek, near Hardman, closed last week, and is reported as having been a grand success.

Ed Wineland has two four-horse teams hauling lumber to town. They make a trip a day. If Ed will let the trucking buildings it will give employment to several carpenters.

P. L. Ham made a hasty trip over to Malloy's mill Friday for the purpose of attending to some business affairs in Portland by telephone, this being the nearest office to Lone Rock.

The notorious Albert Smith was here last Thursday night with his "Wild West" show and took in the youngsters for a few dimes. Verily the suckers will bite at any season of the year in this burg.

A camping party, consisting of about a dozen Gilliamites, started for the mountains the first of last week. Frank Ralston and wife, of Arlington, were among the number. The party expected to be out about ten days.

Our enterprising hotel man, J. M. Williams, has undertaken the job of taking the water out of the creek and bringing it to town for irrigating purpose. If he succeeds in the undertaking, it will prove to be a great benefit to the people who raise gardens, trees, flowers, etc.
