

The new senator, to be elected at the extra session of the Oregon legislature, should be a valuable acquisition to the state's delegation at Washington. His election will cost the people a good round sum, and the people have a right to insist that he be a daisy.

Washington populists are funny fellows. They actually fused with the democrats and silver-republicans, without a split in their own ranks, the other day at Ellensburg. Those Washington populists don't know the first thing about politics. They should take lessons from their brethren in Oregon and Idaho.

The truth of the old adage, "Unlucky lies the head that wears a crown," is being forcibly demonstrated lately in European circles of royalty. The assassination of the empress of Austria, and the attempted killing of the czar of Russia and the queen of Holland, all within a week, is enough to make kings and emperors quake in their boots. When the anarchist is abroad in the land, it is a pretty good thing to be a plain citizen and have to work for a living.

The Times-Mountaineer warmly advocates the improvement of the entrance to the Cascade locks in the Columbia, where two steam boats have been hopelessly wrecked within the last few months, and suggests that Congressman-elect Moody should have little difficulty in securing an appropriation for that purpose when he takes his seat in congress. The suggestion is a good one, but it don't go far enough. Mr. Moody should not only use his influence for the improvement of that part of the river that is already open to navigation, but he should also put forth his very best efforts to secure an appropriation for the improvement of the river above the Dalles. An open river from Lewiston to the sea is what the people of "The Inland Empire" want, and the congressman who will give his best efforts to the accomplishment of that end will always find a warm spot in the hearts of these people.

OPENINGS.

"Where Do They Come From and Where Do They Go To."

The fall is the season of natural selling. The merchant is through with his summer vacation and is physically and mentally prepared for business.

The inside and the outside of the store have been renovated. The schools are open.

The wife is preparing to do what is to be done and what she has put off doing.

People are feeling well, for nature is growing at its best, and there is a sense of buoyancy prevailing in the atmosphere.

The advertiser who is ready with his goods, and has been ready with his advertising, must receive the bulk of this business.

Such a concern in this particular instance, is that of Lord & Co., whose Fall and Winter Clothing Opening is now on. An opening of fashion's fabrics containing so many attractive features that they require the sense of sight to grasp the splendor of their exhibition, the novelty of their styles and the exclusiveness of the patterns. These popular and progressive purveyors of male attire are certainly a credit to Arlington—especially in their methods of original advertising and up-to-the-minute merchandising. Their views on publicity as per a recent interview with this hustling house, are certainly worthy of comment, such as "There's never a run on the market of truth."

"Lies, misrepresentation, exaggeration, swindling and every regular or irregular, direct or indirect, method of dishonesty has been used and is being used in advertising."

"There is nothing original, exclusive, pertinent or of lasting benefit in any medium of publicity not founded upon the whole of the truth."

"Swindling in advertising is the short run to business and the short run out of business."

"The patience of buyers is exhausted in reading of sacrifices that are not made and of discounts that are untrue."

"Common school education and universal enlightenment are reaching into the byways and highways of public life; people to-day know a spade when they see a spade, and a heart when they see a heart."

"Better practice honesty in advertising, whether one be honest or not, for experience clearly demonstrates that honesty in advertising is the best policy."

"The uselessness of dishonesty in advertising is written over the graves of a hundred thousand advertisers."

Such business men deserve the confidence of a community, and judging from what price-tickets caught the hard eyes of the writer, confidence in their sales is a foregone conclusion.

Moore, Lord & Co., have the exclusive control of the famous K. N. & F. Co. Clothing, an anonymous one for "style, service, satisfaction." Their newspaper advertisements are business news and models of attractiveness.

In speaking of the changes of time in advertising, it is amusingly described by an exchange which says:

"When we first went to school we read our lessons in the first reader something like this: 'See the cow. Is the cow like? Yes, the cow is nice. Can the cow run? Yes, the cow can run. Can the cow run as fast as the horse? No, she cannot run as fast as the horse.' But the latest up to date style of reading it by the kid is as follows: 'Get onto the cow. Ain't she a beauty? Sure she's a corker! Can she get a move on herself? You bet she can get a move on herself. Can she hump like de horse? Sit. She ain't in it wid de horse, see?'"

Of Lord & Co. it can be said, however, both of their stocks and their methods, they bear the earmarks of sense and dignity in pleasant contradiction to the above. By the way, have you seen their windows?

Captain F. D. Nelson, of Arlington, has lately completed a test of his new gold saving machine, in the sands of the Columbia, which was most satisfactory to the captain and his friends in the results accomplished. The test made, fully demonstrated the practicability of the machine and shows it to be everything its inventor hoped for. The machine is specially adapted for saving the very fine gold which is known to abound in the sands of many of the rivers of the Pacific slope, but which has heretofore proven too fine to be saved by any known process. Capt. Nelson's process is a combination of mechanics and chemistry, the quicksilver need being treated with a secret solution which greatly enhances its activity in gathering up and holding on to the elusive "color." He is now building a machine of large capacity which will be put to work as soon as completed.
