Salt Rheum, Hands Would Crack Open

"I cannot say too much in praise of Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it has worked wonders in my case. I was afflicted with salt rheum on my hands for many years. I tried many remedies but did not obtain relief. My hands would crack open and bleed profusely and the pain was terrible to bear. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla the flesh has healed and my hands are as smooth as a farmer's hands could be. I have recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla to my friends, and as far as I can learn it has proved satisfactory."—LLOYD B. CHASE, Fittersville, Mass.

CATARH CAN BE CURED

With local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease, Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a cathartic medicine. It is prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a perfect prescription. It is composed of the two ingredients which produce such wonderful results in curing catarrh. NEVER IMITATED QUALITY.

THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. As the genuine Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist one in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The high standing of the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. with the medical profession, and the satisfaction given to millions of families, makes the name of the Company a guaranty of the excellence of its remedy. It is far in advance of all other laxatives, as it acts on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and it does not gripe nor nauseate. In order to get its beneficial effects, please remember the name of the Company—

LOUISVILLE, Ky. NEW YORK, N. Y.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, the hero, has always obscured George Washington the man, and yet the sterling qualities of the man made the hero. Whenever the two characters have been made separate studies, with the result that one class of writers make him a sublime genius and the other a commonplace man made great by circumstances. Washington was as great in wisdom and foresight and as unerring in judgment as a statesman as he was a soldier. His physical endowments, his qualities of mind, his habits, education and training—all tended to round him out and develop him into a perfectly balanced man. No one faculty being developed above another gave him a simplicity that appeared commonplace, but it was the simplicity of genius. Though a man of great dignity he was easily approached. An aristocrat by lineage he was a man of the people. Extremely modest he was fond of state and of ceremony. Though his outdoor life as a surveyor, a soldier and a farmer gave him a rough exterior, a rugged physique and robust health it did not quench his taste for gay uniforms or fashionable apparel. That he was not free from vanity is apparent in the thirty odd portraits of himself, a few painted in the effulgent regalia of war and all in the habiliments of a cavalier. He was as straight as an Indian, six feet two inches tall, with large bones and broad shoulders, wide at the hips; feet large, requiring a No. 11 shoe, and Lafayette said his hands would have been a curiosity for a medical museum. This may explain why he rarely shook hands. He weighed 210 pounds.

To his clothing Washington devoted much thought and attention, not only as a young man, but all his life. A journal written when he was sixteen has several long and elaborate entries about how to have his coats made. In 1754 he records having bought a "superfine blue broadcloth coat with silver trimmings," "6 pairs of the very neatest shoes" and "2 pairs of fashionable mix'd or marble color'd silk hose." It is evident that he always strove to be in the fashion. During Washington's presidency a caller describes him as being dressed in purple satin, and at one of his levees, he was clad in black velvet; his hair in full dress, powdered and gathered behind in a large silk bag; yellow gloves on his hands, holding a cocked hat with a cockade in it, the edges adorned with a black feather about an inch deep. He wore knee and shoe buckles, and a long sword with a finely wrought and polished steel hilt; the scabbard was white polished leather. Wherever he happened to be Washington was constantly demanding a washbasin. The bill of his laundress for the week succeeding his inauguration was for "8 ruffled shirts, 2 plain shirts, 8 stocks, 3 pair silk hose, 2 white hand, 2 silk hand, 1 pr. flanel drawers, 1 hair net." He drove from his residence to the Senate in a cream-colored chariot with richly painted panels. His bootblack once failed to polish the general's huge boots all the way up—a task performed every morning—and the father of his country beat the luckless dandy over the head with them.

Washington was hot-tempered. He wanted John Marshall, afterward the famous justice, to run for Congress and sent for him to explain his wishes. Marshall told Washington he was too poor to afford to give up his business and incur the expense. While thus opposing Washington's wishes Marshall said he never received such a torrent of abuse in his life. He feared Washington would jump on him from across the table, but the row ended in Marshall remaining Washington's guest for a week, and then running for Congress and being elected. Washington was thoroughly upright and honest in his dealings with men. James Parton said he had a genius for rectitude. Jefferson, who did not like him, said his justice was the most inflexible he had ever known and that no motives of friendship or hatred were able to bias his decision. Washington was a faithful attendant at church and was a vestry man, but he took no active part in church affairs outside its business relations.

WHERE HONOR IS DUE.

If you please, you may land George up to the skies. As the man who won battles and never told lies. You may tell of his virtues in story and song. How he carefully sifted the right from the wrong. Of his wisdom in counsel, his bravery in war. How he drove the grim British away from our shores. You may cherish forever his hat and his sword. And 'neath the skies our brave Washington land. Long, long may we hold him an example to youth. For his valor, temperance, courage and truth.

While we gaze with delight on a structure so grand. Let us honor the builder who drew out the plan. And added, through years of infinite care, Small stone upon stone, firmly fixing their place. And though this may be but a girl's point of view. Let us give credit where it is certainly due. And pluck from his laurels one leaf for another. So three cheers for our George, and four for his mother. —YOUTH'S COMPANION.

WASHINGTON'S SECRETARY.

Tobias Lear, who witnessed the first President's Death.

When Gen. Washington died on Dec. 14, 1799, his private secretary, Tobias Lear, sat down and wrote a full account of the melancholy event. His account is a most important document to biographers, but it has rarely, if ever, been published in full and the manuscript has been supposed lost.

Tobias Lear was born at Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 10, 1762, and died at Washington, D. C., Oct. 11, 1816. He was graduated from Harvard in 1783, and in 1785 became private secretary to Gen. Washington. In 1802 he was appointed consular general at Santo Domingo, and in 1804 consular general at Algiers. In 1805 he negotiated a treaty of peace with Tripoli. Col. Lear's manuscript, above referred to, has been supposed to be lost, but the editor of McClure's Magazine has discovered it in the possession of a descendant of the writer, and prints it entirely. Col. Lear describes Washington's last moments as follows:

"About 10 o'clock he made several attempts to speak before he could effect it. At length he said: 'I am just going; have me decently buried, and do not let my body be put into the vault in less than three days after I am dead.'"

"I bowed assent, for I could not speak. He then looked at me again and said: 'Do you understand me?'"

"I replied, 'Yes.'"

"'This well,' said he.

"'About ten minutes before he expired (which was between 10 and 11 o'clock) his breathing became easier; he lay quietly; he withdrew his hand from mine, and felt his own pulse. I saw his countenance change. I spoke to Dr. Craik, who sat by the fire. He came to the bedside. The general's hand fell from the wrist. I took it in mine and put it into my bosom. Dr. Craik put his hands over his eyes. And he expired without a struggle or a sigh."

"While we were fixed in silent grief, Mrs. Washington (who was sitting at the foot of the bed) asked with a firm and collected voice: 'Is he gone?'"

"I could not speak, but held up my hand as a signal that he was no more."

"'This well,' said she in the same voice: 'all is over, and I shall soon follow him. I have no more trials to pass through.'"

Simple in His Tastes.

George Washington was simple in his tastes, and during his youth he was a heavy eater, but was not particular as to what he had. He wanted plain food and plenty of it. During his later years he ate very little. His breakfast at Mount Vernon was of corn cakes, honey and tea, with possibly an egg, and after that he ate no more till dinner. He kept, however, a good table, and usually had friends with him. A book written by Macay gives his experiences when he was in the United States Senate at the time Washington was President. Macay dined with Washington a number of times, and scattered through his diary are bits of gossip about Washington.

WASHINGTON AS AN OLD MAN

Age Found Him Nobly Generous—Dignified at All Times.

"You will meet, sir, an old gentleman riding alone, in plain drab clothes, a broad-brimmed white hat, a hickory switch in his hand, and carrying an umbrella with a long staff, which is attached to the saddle-bow. That person, sir, is Gen. Washington. This delightful portrait of Washington in his old age, when the storms had passed and life ran in quiet groves by the side of his beloved Potomac, was drawn by young Custis.

THE WASHINGTON COAT.

adopted son of the patriarch, and intended to assist the recognition of Washington by a gentleman who had asked to be directed to him.

The wish of Washington when old "to move gently down the stream of life until I sleep with my fathers," was granted. And yet, his latter days at Mount Vernon were busy days; for, every morning, rain or shine, he would mount his horse and make the circuit of his farms, a distance of between twelve and fifteen miles. Not a field or orchard, barn or cabin, wood or clearing, but "wrist passed daily beneath his watchful eye. His Journal tells of a morning spent in teaching a rebellious coral honeysuckle vine to entwine the trunk of some stately forest tree; of the clearing away of the underbrush from a grove of favorite pines; of making drills for the sowing of holly-berries, etc.

Each day he gave personal directions to his overseers, regulating almost with the care of a father the busy life of the negro world, and sometimes even attending directly to their needs and complaints.

In a field of the richest grass and clover Mount Vernon could afford, a tall old sorrel horse, with white face and legs, cropped, in its season, "the luxuriant herbage or stood meditatively, in the shade, doubtless dreaming of passed glories. Every day while making his round of the farms, Washington never failed to stop before this field, lean over the fence and call, "Nelson."

At the sound of his voice the old steed would prick up his ears and run neighing a greeting, to curve his neck under the caressing touch of his master's hand. This was the war horse, "Nelson," whose throaty limbs had borne his master safely through the carnage and tumult of many a bloody battle to the crowning honor at Yorktown, where, sitting on his back, the commander-in-chief of the American armies had received the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. In this active, unostentatious way passed the last years of the noblest man of his age—perhaps of any age.

KNOCKED WASHINGTON DOWN.

Father of His Country Given a Black Eye by a Virginia Politician.

Washington was an eminently fair man. He had a quick temper, but as a rule he kept it under control. Sometimes, however, it got the best of him. This was the case once in Alexandria, Va., when Washington was knocked down by a Virginia politician. Payne was a candidate for the Legislature against Fairfax of Alexandria. Washington supported Fairfax, and when he met Payne he made a remark that Payne considered an insult, and Payne knocked him down. The story went that lightning struck the town that Col. Washington was killed, and some of his troops who were stationed at Alexandria rushed in and would have made short work of Payne had Washington not prevented them. He pointed to his black eye and told them that this was a personal matter and that he knew how to handle a duel. Every one thought that this meant a duel. The next day Payne got a note from Washington asking him to come to the hotel. He expected a duel, but when Washington, however, was in an amiable mood. He felt that he had been in the wrong, and said: "Mr. Payne, I was wrong yesterday, but if you have had sufficient satisfaction, let us be friends." And yet, his latter days at Mount Vernon were busy days; for, every morning, rain or shine, he would mount his horse and make the circuit of his farms, a distance of between twelve and fifteen miles. Not a field or orchard, barn or cabin, wood or clearing, but "wrist passed daily beneath his watchful eye. His Journal tells of a morning spent in teaching a rebellious coral honeysuckle vine to entwine the trunk of some stately forest tree; of the clearing away of the underbrush from a grove of favorite pines; of making drills for the sowing of holly-berries, etc.

Gen. Washington's Courtesy.

In the Century there is an article by Martha Littlefield Phillips, giving "Recollections of Washington and His Friends." The author is a granddaughter of the youngest daughter of Gen. Nathaniel Greene, and she tells the following story in the words of her grandmother, concerning a visit of the latter to Washington at Philadelphia:

"One incident which occurred during that visit was so comical in itself, and so characteristic of Washington, that I recall it for your entertainment. Early in a bright December morning, a droll-looking old countryman called to see the President. In the midst of their interview breakfast was announced; and the President invited the visitor, as was his polite wont on such occasions, to a seat beside him at the table. The visitor drank his coffee from his saucer; but lest any grief should come to the snowy damask, he laboriously scraped the bottom of his cup on the saucer's edge before setting it down on the tablecloth. He did it with such audible vigor that it attracted my attention, and that of several young people present, always on the alert for occasions of laughter. We were so indiscreet as to allow our amusement to become obvious. Gen. Washington took in the situation, and immediately adopted his visitor's method of drinking his coffee, making the scrape even more pronounced than the one he reproduced. Our disposition to laugh was quenched at once."

And How He Developed the Power to Handle Thirty Tons Weight of Lumber Across a Saw Mill Floor Daily.

MINNAPOLIS, Minn.—Dear Dr. Darrin: You have done and more treatment for the past few months has wrought about a miracle on me. When I first came to you I was about crazy from kidney troubles. I was wholly unable to work. Now I am strong and hearty, and able to handle 30 tons weight of lumber across the sawmill floor every day. It is a wonderful and real cure. I thank you with all my heart. I will stand by you and recommend you first, last and all the time. My mother (Mrs. M. A. Johnson), who formerly lived in St. Paul, Minn., now here, has never had a return of her deafness of 12 years' standing, cured by you two years ago. Gratefully yours,

Dr. Darrin's System of Treatment. Electricity, the invention of the 19th century, is well worthy the patient years of investigation and experiment that have been given to it by some of the ablest and most devoted workers of science. Galvani, Volta, Humboldt, and others equally distinguished, spent years in studying the phenomena of this wonderful agent, and then Morse gave it a physical value in the invention of the telegraph. And now, as we have become familiar with the constant miracle of lightning, bending obedient to the slightest touch of man, we see a new wonder in its application by Dr. Darrin, who, by skillful mechanism, directs this subtle force to the destruction of disease and the building up of waning vitality. Dr. Darrin treats with electricity and medicines all curable chronic, acute and private diseases, blood taints, lost or failing manhood, nervous debility, puffiness of eyes, or excesses in old or young; loss of memory, diseases caused by mercury in the improper treatment of private diseases. Dr. Darrin's treatment of private diseases is the most successful in the world. Hours, 10 to 5 daily; evenings, 7 to 8; Sundays, 10 to 12. Consultation free and confidential; question blanks and circulars sent gratis to any address. Patients cured at home. Batteries and belts furnished.

Enlarged Prostate Cured.

The Bane of Old Age No Longer To Be Dreaded.

A Man Eighty-two Years of Age Cured in Dixie, Ark.

One of the oldest and best known men in Perry County has the satisfaction of enjoying perfect health after suffering for more than fifteen years with chronic prostate enlargement, and in inflammation, and will cheerfully tell anyone how he was cured.

MR. H. L. TRUNDLE.

We want this to reach the eyes of every reader of this paper. Mr. H. L. Trundle, Dixie, Ark., a eighty-two years old man, is hale and hearty. He has been a resident of the State of Arkansas; in fact, he looks as young as a man of sixty years. He is a native of Dixie, Ark. Mr. Trundle was a slave to prostate disease. You men who are afflicted know what it means. The days of sorrow, the nights of restlessness, the pain, the frequent calls to pass water, and the inability to do so. He could scarcely get about the house, feeling, trembling and racked with pain from head to foot. In this condition he read a startling announcement in his paper that a marvelous new method for curing prostate disease had been discovered. He wrote to the inventor, giving full particulars, and at once obtained the remedy; in less than ten days he had the satisfaction of experiencing relief. His case was chronic, deep-seated, and the chances of recovery on account of his age were against him. Yet sixty days of continuous use of the famous Solvent-Antiseptic method cured him. You men who are afflicted can have the same experience if you do what Mr. Trundle did; he used Solvent-Antiseptic, a new method of treatment. It is described in two short written books which you can get free of charge, by sending your name and address to the Empire Medical Company, 251 North Third Street, St. Louis, Mo. It won't cost you a cent to get the information, and it may be worth hundreds to you. Write to-day, and refer to this article.
