THE CONDON GLOBE.

THURSDAY, APRIL 27, 1899.

THE OFFICIAL PAPER OF GILLIAM COUNTY, OREGON.

SHALL WE CELEBRATE?

If Condon is to have a Fourth of July celebration this year it is time to begin making preparations for the event. Only a little more than two months remain to make the arrangements and unless we act quickly it may be too late. Condon has not celebrated for several years and the GLOBE believes it would be in order for the town to get up one of the biggest "howlingest" celebrations ever held in Eastern Oregon What say you citizens? Shall we celebrate or shall we not?

In Memoriam.

Margeret A. Keys, the subject of this memior, was born near Roseburg, Douglas Co. Oregon, Nov. 6th, 1878, died near Mayville, Gilliam Co., Oregon, April 15, 1899. The announcement of her death was a shock to her many friends and has cast a gloom over the community where she was well known and loved.

Maggie Keys, as she was familiarly known, was a young lady of rare promise. She has been one of Gilliam County's most successful teachers, having graduated with honor from the Independent Academy of The Dalles with the '91 class. A few years farther on, and again loving hands decked her loved form in her graduating robes; but alas, this time for the silent tomb. Her death falls with almost crushing weight upon her home, especialy upon her invalid father whose pride she was.

It was our privilege to know her intimately the last six years. We knew her as one of the best and purest, hence we recognize her loss as most eminent. She was sensitive, ambitous, sympathetic, the tear drop springing to her eye as quickly as laughter to her lips. Often thy friends recall thy form dear Maggie, sacredly they treasure the pleasant hours spent in thy presence. We turn to the vacant place left Oh! so dreary. Sadly they miss thy sweet voice, and the sunshine of thy gentle smile that has fled forever.

Surrounded by her parents, brothers and sisters, all nearest and dearest by nature's ties, while a smile of heavenly beauty lighted her face, she sweetly fell asleep to awake no more on earth. Besides her aged parents she leaves two sisters and one brother to mourn her loss, one brother having preceded her many years to the farthershore. One sleeps on Erin's green shore, the other, far removed, rests on the sunlit slope of the Pacific, near the home she loved so well.

Another has gone to help people the silent city of our dead. Another flower strewn mound where the bitter tears of sorrow fall, another loved and loving daughter, sister friend in the full blush of life, buoyant with hope, suddenly wearied, drooped and died. While her friends weep that [illegible] ... live should so soon be called from earth, they sorrow not as those without hope. In June, 1898, Maggie resolved to live for something beyond. Something that should be an anchor to her soul when called to pass through the portals we call death. She had never united with any church, there being no church of her choice near her home. From many things that have come to the knowledge of her friends, they believe she had a presentiment that her earthly work was nearly done, but with her usual thoughtfulness she spoke no word of complaint ever appearing bright and hopeful for fear of causing grief to those she loved the best. Some weeks before her death, in bidding a friend goodby, she told them it was for the last time. She'd not live to see them again.

Often during her last hours, her eyes would seek the faces of the anxious watchers, and cheer them with smiles and words of encouragement.

Dear ones "let not your hearts be troubled" your loss is her infinite gain. The cruel thorns along life's rough way will never more pierce her feet. She has gained a life eternal, where sickness pain and sorrow never come, where the scorching breath of fever is never felt, where the mildew of death never falls where the blight of sin never enters, where all tears are wiped away. For her, life, with joy and sorrow, tears and triumphs is o'er. To her loved ones is left a memory sweet with the fragrance of her influence and life to brighten the gloom that falls like a pall over her home.

In this dark hour of sorrow may their great roll call may father, mother brother and sister answer here, and in our father's house be gathered to go out no more forever. J. A. C.

Joe Trevett and Frank Brown were up from Rock creek Saturday, cashing in a few coyote scalps. Joe had the topknots of 14 of the varmints and Frank had 10. It is a pretty good country where a coyote pup two days old is worth as much as a yearling sheep but such is the case in Eastern Oregon this year.
