

AN OREGON ALGERIST.

The Crook County Journal is the first Oregon newspaper we have noticed lately, to come out as an apologist and eulogist of Alger and Algerism. A recent issue of that paper says:

"Our soldiers may have been fed on impure and unwholesome food, by reason of negligence on the part of government officers and possibly on the part of Alger himself, but as an offset to this it may be stated that under his conduct of the War office the most successful campaigns of modern or ancient times has been added to the world's history. The time will come when his achievements will be considered in the true light, untarnished by the taint of bad beef. Then will his name be linked with that of Stanton as an able war secretary."

It will be a cold day when Alger's name will be "linked" with anything but that which is unsavory and unclean. His political pull and his millions will continue to keep him prominently before the public for a time—for there are certain circles in which political influence and great wealth are the only credentials needed—but among decent people his name and his record will ever be a shame and a reproach. His apologists may

Wise him and dine him, and praise as they will,
But the odor of bad beef will linger there still.

Jo F. Dwyer representative of the newest and biggest tobacco trust, The Continental Tobacco Co., was in town Saturday. Mr. Dwyer is one of the four lucky ones among the Portland tobacco drummers. Out of over 30 tobacco drummers traveling out of Portland in this one line, a month ago, but four remain on the road and the others are looking for a job. Under trust methods four men can do the work that it required 35 men to do under the competitive system and without any advance in salaries or expenses. At the same time the price of tobacco has increased two or three cents a pound with a good prospect of a still further advance. It is evident that the trust is not doing business for its health.

RIVER IMPROVEMENTS

It was stated in these columns several days ago that the proposed boat railway between here and Celilo had been abandoned, and now a Washington correspondent to the Oregonian verifies that statement. The correspondent says:

"Evidence continues to accumulate indicating that the proposed boat railway at the Dalles of the Columbia known as the Celilo falls and Three-mile rapids, of the Columbia river, will never be constructed. Engineer officers, with few exceptions, have been opposed to any such scheme. It is true these advantages were pointed out and urged upon the engineers until they accepted it. It would only cost about $2,500,000 while the double locks and canal would cost in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. At the same time it has been very unfortunate that the energies of Oregon and Washington were not devoted to a canal and locks, even at a higher price, for by this time the work would be under way. The boat railway proposition made it possible for the Washington delegates to practically ignore the improvements of the Columbia and the project to open the Columbia to the sea.

A board of engineers recently investigated the different schemes for overcoming the obstruction to navigation and their report was as follows: "First—That the obstructions to navigation in the Columbia river from the navigable waters thereof below Three-mile rapids to the navigable waters above Celilo falls can be overcome in the most feasible, speedy and economical manner, and in that best adapted to the present necessities of commerce, and to its future development, by the construction of a portage railway, of standard gauge, on the south side of the Columbia river, from Celilo to Dalles City, the cost of which is estimated to be $454,390.

"Second—When the necessity shall arise for accommodation greater than can be furnished by a portage railway, this board recommends that the construction of a canal, located on the Oregon side of the river, be undertaken." In the face of such recommendation by a competent board of engineers it would seem that congress cannot well refuse to make an appropriation for a portage road transportation and in the construction of canal and locks which must be the ultimate means of overcoming the obstacles to navigation. All of Eastern Oregon and Washington being interested in the opening of the river, and Portland and Astoria being like interested, there should be enough pressure brought to bear to overcome the influence of Seattle and Tacoma, and secure an appropriation at the next session of congress for a portage road, and also to commence operations upon the canal and locks.—Times-Mountaineer.

It is a Sanford Mo., man who has this statement sewn to his undershirt: "My appendix has been cut out," and he explains his case in this way: "You see these are the palmy knitting days of the surgeon. If a man falls in a fit, faints or happens to lose consciousness for any reason, they cart him off to the hospital and operate for appendicitis without waiting for him to come to and say what ails him. I've been sliced open once, and I don't hanker for encures."
