"Recently, after the Rock Island wreck at Volland," says the Kansas City Journal, "Dr. G. H. Kittle, of Moundridge, Mo., put in a claim against the railroad for $1,920 on account of gold lost. The company thought it unreasonable that a country dentist should be getting so much gold at one shipment, and so it combated the claim. But Dr. Kittle proved his loss conclusively, and the company paid over the full amount." The gold used in dentistry in the United States last year was valued at $600,000.

Excitement Runs High. Mr. Cole, the mail agent for Porcu pine City, brought down on his last trip a small pile of gold dust taken from claim No. 1 above Discovery, on Porcupine creek. It was the partial output of the first washout by the use of a sluicebox on that claim, and was sold to S. Weitzman for $35. Mr. Cole says the miners on McKinley and Porcupine creeks are just beginning to take out gold, and the field soon will astonish the nations. The water is quite high, and only the elevated rimrock can be worked, but as the work progresses the claims are growing richer, excitement is running high and daily arrivals of prospectors are large. dairy and ranch, 12@18c per pound.

A Boy's Love.

RS. CARRUTHERS flushed slightly as she read the name on the pasteboard. "I will see him here, Jane," she said, with studied calmness, "and remember, please, that I am not at home to any one for the next hour."

She nestled down on her settee, pil-lowing the shimmering gold of her head against its cushions, and waited. She was glad he had come. Her thoughts traveled back to their first meeting that day on the front at Brighton, and she smiled as she recalled the gust of wind that caught her handkerchief, a scented scrap of lace and cambric, and carried it fluttering to his feet. He was young, a mere boy in fact, and singularly handsome, and he actually blushed as he restored the triffe. There was something frank and fresh about him-few of her men friends ever blushed-and her tendencies were sufficiently Bohemian to ren der more formal introduction unneces sary; before the week was out he bad lunched and dined at her hotel. Time had flown for her since then; bright summer days spent drifting among the upper reaches of the Thames, with the heat of the afternoon lazed away in some shady backwater; morning drives to some old-world retreat among the Surrey hills; afternoons on the lawns at Hurlingham, strolling, talking, tea drinking among the smartest in the land, with the band of the Guards crashing out the masterpleces of great German composers, interspersed with melodies from the Casino. They had been friends, nothing more, but each day had brought a fresh delight, and she had been happy. Now it was to end; he had come to say, "Good-by." "It seems almost like a dream," she murmured; "I wonder what I shall do without him?" The hangings swayed aside, and the boy advanced with outstretched hand. She smiled and gave him hers without rising.

"Sit down," she said, "and have some coffee, unless you prefer something stronger."

"Coffee, thanks," he answered, drop ping into a chair beside her. She poured some out and handed ! to him, together with a tiny box of tortoise-shell and silver. He laughed softly as he opened it and saw a row of miniature cigarettes. "Ah! so you indulge, it appears. How often?" "Oh, sometimes!"

"And I haven't known it until this moment! Will you join me now?"ffering the case

"No, thank you; I prefer to see you smoke. There is a match beside you." He lit one of the cigarettes and puffed away in stlence, until a blue haze had gathered about his head. Then he looked across at her. "I am going abroad," he said, abruptly. "Are you surprised?" "Assuming that you mean some hor rible tropic"-he nodded-"yes, I am. I suppose it means the loss of everything that has made your life pleasant in the past-yes? and the gain ofwhat?

"Nothing." "Then why go?"

She leaned back, clasping her hands behind her head, and her sleeves, falling, disclosed arms as smooth and white as ivory. Their glances met and she asked again, "Why go?"

"Because I have no choice," he answered. "Look here, Madge, we've been friends, jolly good friends, and God only knows how I shall get on without you; I will be perfectly frank, and tell you just how it stands. My father, as you know, was a country parson. He ought never to have put me through Sandhurst; it was beyond his means-I often wondered how he managed to do all he did, but I really knew nothing of his affairs until his death last year. I found out then that he never did have much beyond his pride, and it appeared that towards the end he had dabbled in stocks and shares. Well, you know what happens when parsons walk into bucket-shops there was barely enough left to keep the young one at Sandhurst. That is why I am exchanging for the West Indies." He looked up thoughtfully at the smoke cloud wreathing from his cigarette. "Of course I shall see some thing of life. I have seen little so far; school, Sandhurst, an outlandish depot in the west of Ireland, and-town,"

She shrugged her shoulders beneath the billowy lace and muslin of her demitollette, and there was another pause. "How strange it will seem when you have gone-I shall feel quite lost by myself." She spoke softly, in a tone almost of soliloquy, watching him closely to see the effect of her words. He made no reply, and she went on, "When one has so few friends, it is hard to lose them-the places are so hard to fill." He winced at that, and a mementary gleam flashed in her eyes. "It will seem strange," she repeated;

After awhile he rose to his feet. She rose, too, and stood before him, looking into his eyes as though she would read his soul. A wild desire to crush her in his arms took possession of him, and the finger-nails bit into the paims of his clenched hands.

"Must you go?" she whispered, drawing nearer to him.

"I have no choice," he said, again. "You want money," she continued; well, I am rich." He did not reply.

"Would you do something for me?" "Yes," he said, simply; "I would give my life for you." Her eyes dropped, and a delicious color crept into her cheeks. "Well, before you go, do me a favor. Marry me. He did .- St. Paul's.

TRACING SUICIDE Believed that Unsuitable Diet Has an Injurious Effect.

Dr. Halg is of the opinion that sulcide may be traced to error in diet, the error being the enting of meat, the drinking of beer and of tea and the smoking of tobacco. His facts all fall comfortably into their places in support of his hypothesis. Are there not that her doctor is going to recommend more suicides among men than among a change of air.—Chicago Timeswomen, and do not men consume more meat, more beer and more tobacco than the women? Again, suicide is more common in England than in Scotland, not apparently because the Scotch are a more canny race, but because the English eat more meat and drink more beer, while the Scotch eat less meat and drink whisky instead of beer. After maintaining that suicide was less common among the Scotch, it was perhaps hardly polite, when addressing a Scotch audience, to go on to say that suicide increased with civilization. But the fact was explained on the ground of more injurious diet, that of civilized man being more productive of urle acid and thus of suicide than that which prevails where civilization is less advanced. Urle acid is, in fact, at the bottom of all this, and, according to Dr. Halg, the incidence of suicide tallies with the daily, annual and life fluctuations of uric acid in the blood, being commonest when urle acid is most abundant, namely, in the mornings, in spring and summer and in childhood and the full prime of life.

We have no doubt that errors of diet are responsible for much, and, among other things, for a certain number of suicides; nay, we could go further and admit that unsultable diet, derangement of the proper relation between nutrition and waste and the consequent loading of the tissues and the blood with abnormal products of metabolism have much to do with that the temper and discontent which lead men to lay their hands violently upon their neighbors and sometimes on themselves. All this may be taken for granted, but it is at present far from proved that the peccant material is in all cases the same, and still further are we from being agreed that uric acid is the origin of the evil.-Hospital.

Giants of Patagonia. The tribes to the east of the Cordilleras, in southern Patagonia, belong to Araucanian stock, and are a superior race. The Tehuelches-as they call themselves-of southern and eastern Patagonia are the people whose unusual stature gave rise to the fables of the early days to the effect that the natives of this region were glants averaging nine to ten feet in height. It is a fact that they are the tallest human beings in the world, the men averaging but slightly less than six feet, while individuals of four to six inches above that mark are not uncommon. They are in reality by no means savages but somewhat civilized barbarians. They are almost unacquainted with the use of firearms, notwithstanding some contact with the whites, but they have plenty of horses and dogs. Unsurpassed hunters, they capture the guanaco and the rhea, or South American ostrich, and from the skins of these and other animals they make clothes and coverings for their tents. They make beautiful "capes," or mantles, of furs and feathers which are highly prized by Europeans, and find a ready market, most of the proceeds being spent for bad whisky, which is brought into the country in quantities,

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer com-plaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in a practice of over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentary, diarrhoea, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-ru-na. Those desiring further particulars should send for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.
