Lost—On the Ferry Canyon road within four miles of Condon, a pocket memorandum book, containing papers and accounts. Finder please leave same at this office or hand to the owner, H. F. Downer.

Mrs. D. S. Wright and Miss Dora Downing came over from Fossil Saturday and will reside here this winter. Mrs. Wright's condition is much improved. She is now able to walk with the aid of crutches.

Herbert Halstead, of the Lost Valley Lumber Co., was in town yesterday. Mr. Halstead is anxious to have telephone connection established between Lost Valley and Condon and is trying to induce others along the line to take hold of the matter. He says it will require but little expense to connect the wire fences between the two places which would give a very satisfactory service. If the line is established it will be connected with the Condon exchange.

The folly of patronizing outside business houses through traveling agents and salesmen is well illustrated in the cases of those who some time since ordered suits and clothing from a Chicago house at the solicitation of one C. E. Bates, who in every instance demanded and received part payment in advance, and who instead of forwarding the money to his firm, spent it here at the gambling tables. His victims are now wondering where he and their money is and when the goods will arrive. Parties here are also in receipt of letters of inquiry concerning Bates from other places where he seems to have played the same game. In order to avoid losses of this kind patronize local dealers. They are entitled to and deserve it.—Creek County Journal.

The Rinehart restaurant will serve a fine turkey dinner on Thanksgiving day, also a midnight supper for the dance. If you wish to enjoy fine meals on that day go to Rinehart's.

C. C. Wilson opened his new saloon in the Elz building on Tuesday. Charlie has one of the neatest places in the county and will no doubt get his share of the trade. See ad of the "Model Saloon" in this issue.

The "Home Comfort" agent is again abroad in the land and, we understand, is as usual, doing a land office business. The Globe believes in patronizing home merchants every time and would advise the people of this section of Gilliam county to think twice before paying a traveling agent as much or perhaps more for an article than you can buy it from home dealers. Their verbal offer of several years time don't count after your signature adorns one of their iron clad notes and the writer can recall more than one instance in which their patrons were obliged to do some mighty tall hustling to meet the note when due, after being assured that they would be given all the additional time they wanted. Patronize the home dealer. He is the man who carries and accommodates you when you need it.

Vice-president Hobart Dead.

Twickenham.

BY MISS ROBERTA GRIF PIN.

(The following verses are sent us for publication, the accompanying note from the author stating that they were first sent to the Fossil Journal and refused by that paper, the author naively adding, "I think it was because they are too much in favor of Twickenham for county seat to suit the Journal.") As we want to see Twickenham have a fair show in this matter we gladly publish the poem which may be regarded as the first gun of the Wheeler county county seat campaign, the echoes of which may possibly continue to reverberate up and down and across the John Day gorge for years to come.—Enron Globe]

I'll tell you now of the place I love,
Whose grace cannot be beat;
'Tis Twickenham, by the river side,
Running for the county seat.
It is not much of a town just now,
'Tis only a few years old
But 'tis a place to build a town
In beauties manifold.
There's now a free school and a street
In the town of Twickenham,
And we hope there'll be a county seat
At the town of Twickenham.
There is a ferry and hotel too,
With meals both good and cheap,
The people there are kind to you,
While running for the county seat.
There's level land and plenty of room,
Down by the river's side
To build a city and make it boom,
With fame both far and wide.
There is a store and a dwelling neat
In the town of Twickenham,
And we are after the county seat
At the town of Twickenham.
And people will come to the city
By the river cool and sweet,
Where they'll join and sing this ditty,
In honor of the county seat.
They'll come, the wise the witty,
Keep coming one by one
To help build up the city
When the town is well begun.
From all over Wheeler county
They'll flock in a perfect jam
When we get the county court house,
At the town of Twickenham.

Dr. Vogel, the eye specialist, who is well known here was severely at Lexington last Friday night at a ball, says a report from that place. Vogel made a remark to the effect that Mrs. Jack Lane and her sister were the only good dancers there. The remark was resented by Mrs. Lane's husband, who with Otto Summers gave Vogel an unmerciful beating. The doctor walked to Douglas, 12 miles, the same night, without hat or coat.

ARLINGTON.

Mr. Holcomb bought and shipped a carload of horses here last Monday. James Blacklock furnished four fine grays. Wheat is worth 38 cents. Not much changing hands.

Early sown wheat in this section looks very fine. Some volunteer on summer fallow is almost ready to head.

Grass is plentiful and stock is doing fine.

Our merchants are sending out lots of goods now mostly bought by the wheat handlers, notwithstanding the black eye some are trying to give our lively town.

The roads are reported in fine condition now in all directions.

We do not object to the Condon goose hunters who come down and kill their geese with four-bit pieces; but those fellows who come down and fire three or four hundred shots to get three or four geese, and scare all the others out of the country, make our old hunters tired. Be sure to say you killed them boys, no matter what they cost you.
