IMMIGRANTS TO OREGON.

Whether the immigrant comes to Oregon from the parched sands of Southern California, the Spring snowdrifts of Minnesota and other Northern States or the cyclone swept prairies extending from Iowa to Missouri, the scene that smiles upon his vision here seems to him almost a paradise by comparison. Even amid these vernal surroundings the immigrant may at first experience qualms of homesickness; he misses and yearns irresistibly for his former associations and accustomed phenomena; he would like to see a snowdrift in April or May, or he craves an hour in the scorching glare of the sands, or of an anxious watchfulness for the festive and scarcely heralded tornado; he feels that to go back to old experiences would be a relief and a mental luxury. But these sensations disappear in a year or two, at most, and then few indeed are they who would exchange a home in this emerald land for one in any part of the country in which they have dwelt, especially after a revisit there—unless, indeed, it be some spot in these Pacific Coast states between British Columbia and mid-California.

Gradually, but in ever-increasing numbers, these immigrants are crossing the great backbone of the continent or drifting northward, into Oregon—from the comparatively barren hills and valleys of New England, from the emervating though "Sunny" South, from the severe Winters and scarcely less severe Summers of the most northerly states, even from the fertile but, as they think, though perhaps mistakenly, over-populated Middle West. Here they need not be, should not be, disappointed. Everything may not be just as they had pictured it; perhaps not just as some over-zealous pamphleteer has represented it; but if they withhold final judgment a little, look around, select judiciously and exercise even a moderate degree of industry and prudence, they will be glad, most of the time, that they turned their footsteps toward this beautiful, bountiful, varied, resourceful and altogether goodly land.—Telegram.

LOST VALLEY.

Wild strawberries are plentiful in the hills just now.

Jack Wells is spending a few days in Lost Valley at present.

Arthur Madden and Otto Wick made Lost Valley a very pleasant call Sunday.

J. Wheeler moved his family up from Condon Thursday. They will spend the summer here.

Mrs. Herbert Halstead returned Sunday, after a few weeks visiting with friends in Fossil.

S. Hoskins and family visited relatives here several days last week on their way home to Hardman after several months visiting with relatives at Clarno.

C. White, Miss Lola Heighman and Miss Grace Frizzell paid friends in Lost Valley a pleasant visit on Saturday and Sunday last.

F. W. Courtwright has disposed of his property in this place and, together with his family, has departed for the coast at Langlois, Curry county.

LONE ROCK.

The weather for the last week has been very dry with an occasional hot wind that is quite damaging to crops. Hay cutting has commenced and the yield of alfalfa is excellent.

Quite a number of our people have been off the past week, some to Fossil attending the Baptist annual association, and some to Heppner attending the M. E. Church annual district conference.

Charlie Stevens expects to bring his mother home from Fossil this week. Her many friends here will be glad to see her back home and hope she will speedily recover from the effects of her broken arm, which happened a few days ago.

Joe Woolery, of Ione, was over to our burg this week and sold his immense stock of general merchandise at this place to P. L. Ham and W. T. Matlock, and a crew of men are now busy enclosing the stock. This leaves our town with only one store again but plenty of room for another. Who will be the next to venture the enterprise?

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain-Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. Cuts, burns, frostbites, quinsy, pains in the side and chest, glandular and other swellings, are quickly cured by applying it. Every bottle warranted. Price, 25c and 50c, at the Hudson Pharmacy, C. W. Crofield, Mgr.

A TRAGEDY.

James Collins Shot Down by L. L. Cooke. Result of an Old Feud. Cooke Confesses.

Another tragedy has been added to Gilliam county's list for this year. Last Thursday morning James Collins, who kept the Junction House and feed yard, seven miles this side of Arlington, was shot and killed by L. L. Cooke, a neighbor. The men have had trouble for some time over a certain tract of land which both claimed, and on the fatal morning Collins had taken his mowing machine and commenced cutting a crop of rye which grew on the land. Cooke saw the work had commenced, and, arming himself with a Winchester rifle he rode to the field and ordered Collins to quit work. In the altercation which followed Collins was shot through the left thigh, about six inches above the knee, the ball shattering the bone and severing the femoral artery. It would seem that had Collins received any attention the wound would not have necessarily proven fatal but as nothing was done to check the flow of blood he slowly bled to death. After the shooting Cooke went to the house of Ralph Ashpaugh and asked Ashpaugh to go with him to Collins' assistance, whom, he said, he had found badly hurt in his field. Ashpaugh did so, and the two men removed Collins to his own house. He was then in a semi-conscious condition but they left him to his fate. About two o'clock in the afternoon Cooke went to Arlington and reported that Collins had been murdered. He disclaimed any knowledge of who did it but from his manner Coroner Ruedy suspected him and had him placed under arrest.

Coroner Ruedy, with a number of citizens and with Cooke in charge of Constable Sweeney, then repaired to the scene of the tragedy and began an investigation. A jury was empaneled and Cooke and Mr. and Mrs. Ashpaugh were examined separately. Cooke testified that he saw a stranger haul Collins to his house and carry him inside after which he drove away towards Arlington. That he went to see what was the matter and found Collins nearly unconscious, gave him a drink of water and left him. Went back at noon and found him dead. Ashpaugh testified that he helped Cooke take Collins to the house but that he heard no shots and did not know how Collins was hurt. Mrs. Ashpaugh was then placed on the stand and she testified that she and her husband heard three shots and they remarked that perhaps Cooke and Collins were having trouble. Ashpaugh was again brought in and upon being confronted with his wife's statement he admitted that Cooke killed Collins. Cooke was again brought in and upon being shown the statements of both the Ashpaughs he broke down and confessed the murder.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree.

On Saturday Cooke was given a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Eli, at Arlington—S. A. D. Gurley appearing for the state and Judge A. S. Bennett, of the Dalles, for the defense. After hearing the evidence the justice took the matter under advisement until Monday at 10 o'clock a. m., at which time Cooke was held without bail to the circuit court. Nothing new in the way of evidence developed in the preliminary trial more than was brought out at the coroner's inquest, the substantial facts of which are given above. Sheriff Wilcox went down Saturday morning to look after the matter and at the close of the preliminary hearing Monday morning that official took charge of Cooke and brought him to Condon, where he is now lodged in the county jail.
