HOMESTEADERS ATTENTION!

The GLOBE will publish your final proof notices for $2.50. You now pay $7.50. When ready to make proof ask the Land Office officials to send your notice to this paper that you may save this money. Five dollars saved, in this way, is better than $5.00 earned raising 40 cent wheat; it's so much easier you know. Call at this office and we will tell you all about it.

Ed Hartman arrived from Shedd, Linn county, Friday, being called home by the sad death of his brother, mention of which is made elsewhere in this issue.

A number of fine shade trees have been planted along our streets lately. Had this work been attended to ten years ago Condon might now be as cool and shady as a sylvan nook. Better late than never, however.

John Harrison, the well known stockman of Thirtymile, was in town Tuesday. Mr. Harrison is out of the sheep business for the present having recently sold 1000 head to James Simpson, of Clackamas county, and the remainder of his band to Frank Armstrong.

S. D. Baxter, of the Glone office, left Monday for Pendleton where he will visit a few days, eat some Thanksgiving turkey and, incidentally, see his best girl. This is Sam's first pleasure trip in a long time and he had his mind made up for a gala week when he left home.

An attachment has been issued by Wm. Keys & Son, of Mayville, against the Mayville Drug Co. Sheriff Wilcox served the writ yesterday but later the matter was adjusted and settled between the parties interested. The store has been closed however and Mayville people will now buy their drugs in Condon.

Mrs. J. F. Gullette, who was attacked last week with typhoid symptoms, was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital at Portland on Tuesday. Mrs. R. E. Armstrong accompanied her as far as Arlington and saw her safely aboard the train for Portland. The patient stood the trip first rate and her many friends hope that her recovery may be a speedy one.

To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general treatment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. OBITUARY.

Hartman.

William Russell Hartman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anon Hartman, of near this city, died on Thursday, November 23, 1900, of a complication of diseases, after an illness of five weeks' duration, aged 23 years, 9 months and 11 days. The subject of this sketch was born at Wheatland, California, February 11, 1875. In 1883 the Hartman family left their sunny Southern home to try their fortunes in the then frontier country of Eastern Oregon. They stopped for a time near Weston, Umatilla county, but in 1885 they finally settled in this neighborhood, where they have resided and where they are recognized as one of the most highly respected families. Here Will grew to manhood, and here, by industry and perseverance, he had already accumulated considerable property and had come to be regarded as one of the leading young farmers of the county. He was married on February 15, 1900, to Miss Bertha McDaniel, a highly respected and young lady of the neighborhood, and their future was bright and full of hope and promise, when, in the strength of his young manhood, he was stricken down and carried by unseen hands across the Great Divide which lies just a little way beyond the sunset of life. To his young wife, a widow while yet a bride, to his heart-broken parents, who felt that they needed him to comfort their declining years, and to his brothers, with whom he always was a favorite, will go forth the earnest sympathy of a host of friends. The funeral occurred on Saturday at 2:00 P. M. and was largely attended, the services being conducted by Rev. Edward Curran, of this place.

Shaw.

At his home on Beecher Flat, Sunday, November 25, 1900, David Shaw aged about 60 years. Deceased was an old resident of this county and was highly respected. He was a veteran of the civil war and was for some time a prisoner at Andersonville. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters to mourn his loss. The interment took place Tuesday in the Condon cemetery.

Bimi Biffi Bang!

Roy Ebbert and William Campbell, two well known farmers who reside just north of town, engaged in a fist encounter Monday afternoon on the sidewalk in front of the Hudson Pharmacy on Main street.

From reports gleaned on the ground just after the cessation of hostilities, the fight was a fair one and nobody interfered. The first round was a straight stand-up-and-knock-it-out and, the bystanders say, lasted about 10 minutes.

Round two was a clinch in which Campbell went down without punishment and in the third one or both the belligerents sent into the big show window of the Hudson Pharmacy, wrecking the same beyond recognition.

The fourth round was an all round breakaway for breath and, so far as we could learn, the scrap stopped short with honors about even.

Just then the marshal hove in sight and, gathering both belligerents beneath his broad and heavy wing, he brought the braves before Recorder May who said, "A V and cost."

So far as we could learn the cause of the collision was a cow—a deceased cow—who cancelled her engagement with Campbell's herd a few days ago and whose carcass Campbell carried to a canyon contiguous to the course by which the water comes to Ebbert's and Dell Rice's springs. Ebbert remonstrated with Campbell by asking him to remove the carcass and Campbell remonstrated against this suggestion by trying to remove Ebbert and then and there they went at it and there you are.

Hereford Calves.

E. P. Weir returned the first of the week from North Yakima, where he purchased two full-blood Hereford calves, a bull and heifer. They were bought from A. J. Spahn, of North Yakima. These were taken out to his Mayville stock ranch. The young stock are registered and will be daily transferred to Mr. Weir in a few weeks. Mr. Weir now has on his ranch one of the finest bands of Hereford cattle in the state, consisting of 31 head. The Mayville country is well adapted for stock. Mr. Weir raised two crops of alfalfa and a good third crop is being pastured this winter. —Arlington Independent.

Six Frightful Failures.

Six terrible failures of six different doctors nearly sent Wm. H. Mallen of Lockland, O., to an early grave. All said he had a fatal long trouble and that he must soon die. But he was urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. After taking five bottles he was entirely cured. It is positively guaranteed to cure all diseases of Throat, Chest and Lungs, including Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Condon Drug Co's.

Stricken With Insanity.

Arlington Independent, Nov. 23. Fred Hensel, of Olex, was in town yesterday evening, having been accompanied by Grant Wade and H. D. Randall. The first named is confined at the Hotel Grande, suffering from mental aberration, and is awaiting the action of the county court. Up to this morning nothing has been done in the matter except the notification of the county judge, who instructed that he be held here a few days awaiting developments. Mr. Randall expressed it as his opinion that the man should be confined, as there is no question of his mental condition.

The School Literary.

It was the good fortune of the writer to be present at the literary society, which is conducted by the pupils of the Condon public school, on last Friday evening, and it gives us pleasure to testify to the high quality of work which is being done by that organization. It happened, on the evening in question, that neither of the teachers were present, and the orderly and dignified manner in which the proceedings were conducted speaks volumes for the pupils. The debate was the principal feature of the evening and each one of the dozen or so speakers showed by their remarks that the question had been carefully studied and prepared. The Globe believes that there are boys and girls now taking their first lessons in public speaking in the School Literary Society who will be heard of later in life in matters pertaining to the progress of the world, and whom Condon and Oregon will then delight to honor and to claim as their illustrious sons and daughters.

Abraham Lincoln.

[Oration delivered by Miss Lilla Clarke at Public School Literary Society, November 16, 1900.]

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, I have chosen the life of Abraham Lincoln as my subject. I think his is one of the greatest of all the presidents' lives—a life which by its very simplicity, honesty and moral courage will leave its influence as long as the world stands. "Abraham Lincoln was born in Hardin county, Ky., February 12, 1809, a few years after which his father moved to Indiana, the family floating down the Ohio river on a raft. Brought up in the most humble conditions of life he received but little education in his youth and this little was due to his own intelligence and perseverance. Abraham Lincoln was a poor boy and was compelled to help support his father's family by the hardest of manual labor. This, however, did not discourage him in his love for knowledge, and even while a rail-splitter he spent his evenings in study, not in a cozy, warm parlor lighted by a gasolene lamp, but instead, in a rude log cabin which he himself had helped to build, and by the light of a mere candle. In this way he fitted himself for a life that has made him immortal. While very young his great ambition was for a public career. He became much interested in law. One of the first books that interested him was "The Statutes of Indiana." After reading them he never let a law book pass him. At twenty-four years of age he came into the possession of a set of Blackstones, the reading of which gave him an inspiration. Never in his whole life, he said, was his mind so completely absorbed. But from these he did not get the idea of becoming a lawyer; in fact, it was through a friend urging that it occurred to him that such a profession was within his reach. He accepted the suggestion, and devoted most of his time for the next three or four years to legal reading. He was admitted to the bar in 1836, and commenced his practice at Springfield, Illinois. His career as a lawyer was remarkable in many ways. When a client came to him his first effort was to arrange matters, if possible, to avoid a suit. He once said: "Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbor to compromise whenever you can. Never stir up litigation. A worse man can scarcely be found than one who does this." In all his arguments he meant the jury should see that he was right, and for this reason he never used a word the jurist could not understand. He first took part in public affairs in serving as captain in the Black Hawk war. He ran twice successfully for the Legislature of his state, and at one time was defeated for Speakership of the House by one vote only.

"Abraham Lincoln was elected to Congress in 1846. While there his reputation became so high that, November 6, 1860, he was elected President of the United States. No sooner had he taken his seat than the Southern states began their long-threatened attempt to secede from the Union. There followed, as you all know, a long, disastrous war. Nothing could so test a president's integrity and capability. But Abraham Lincoln proved equal to the crisis. While the war was still going on Mr. Lincoln was re-elected president. He said he didn't suppose the people wanted to swap horses while they were crossing a river. After finding all other means failing, he broke the back of the Southern Confederacy by issuing his decree of Emancipation of the Negro. This was one of the greatest of recorded human acts and one of the great turning points in the world's history. The later events of his public career are familiar to us all. We know that his determination and sterling honesty sustained him and his country to the last. He restored the National authority and sacrificed his life in its accomplishment.

"Over thirty-three years have passed since Abraham Lincoln was shot down at Ford's theatre by John Wilkes Booth, an incident which filled this country with horror and sadness. An announcement had been made that President Lincoln and General Grant, with their wives, would visit Ford's theatre, April 14, 1865. General Grant was obliged to go away and could not accompany the President. That night the theatre was crowded. Lincoln's box was decorated with flags. Booth visited the box about nine o'clock, probably locating Lincoln's seat, but it was supposed through curiosity, while perfect stillness reigned throughout the house, a shot was heard, which ended the life of one of the greatest men our country has ever known. A life whose memory will be ever sacred. To all who love their noble country. He was a man whose like the world again shall never see. To exult with blame or praise, The hand marks that attest his bright, brief reign Are battles, not the pomp of gala days.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life. Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is no longer in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult.
