RAILROAD.

Gilliam County People Getting Restless. About to Take Bull by Horns and Bold Road Themselves.

After years of waiting for foreign capital to come in and solve the problem of rail communication between the big wheat fields of Central and Southern Gilliam county and the Columbia river, Gilliam county people are beginning to get weary and are about to take the bull by the horns and solve this most important question in their own way and by their own efforts.

The old fable of the quails and the farmer will be found apropos in this connection. The quail family lived in the farmer's wheat field and the wheat was ripe. The young quails heard the farmer and his son plan to have their relatives, their neighbors or their friends come and cut the grain, and the youngsters were frightened and wanted to move.

The sick of this community—Mrs. Dodson, Nellie Winzenried and Mrs. Nott—are all reported to be convalescent. The shooting match for Thanksgiving turkeys demonstrated that our vicinity has several crack shots. They are hard to beat.

A Big Mine.

L. M. Hughes and L. J. Johnson, of Northport, Wash., president and vice-president, respectively, of the Roseland Consolidated Mining Co., are here this week in the interest of their company. Mr. Johnson is an old resident of Oregon, having been for a number of years engaged in the newspaper business at Tillamook. To a GLOBE reporter the other day Mr. Johnson stated that the property of his company consists of seven claims containing in all 140 acres. Upon each claim there is a well defined ledge of mineral, the seven ledges aggregating about 1000 feet of ore.

The location of the claims, Mr. Johnson says, is peculiarly adapted to successful mining operations at a minimum cost, as the ledges are all being developed by tunnels which are located at the bottom of a deep gorge or canyon which cuts through the mountains of that region, and which is 3000 feet deep. This gives the owners an immense amount of ore above the tunnel level which can be extracted at a trifling cost, as compared with hoisting it through a shaft to the upper surface. A fine stream of water runs through the canyon which, it is stated, will furnish all the electrical power that will ever be required to operate the mines. The claims are covered with a fine growth of timber, which is an important factor in the development and operation of a great mine, as all the necessary timbers and lumber can be secured right on the ground at the mere cost of cutting.

The mines are located about 3 miles from Northport, one mile from a railroad line and 4 1/2 miles from a smelter now in course of construction. This is of prime importance, as the character of all the ore is base and requires smelting to extract the values, and as base lodes are considered by all mining men to be much better propositions to operate than free milling ones on account of their greater permanency and the fact that they almost invariably increase in value with depth, the owners of this property feel confident, Mr. Johnson says, that they have a bonanza. Mr. Johnson showed us specimens of native copper ore which, he says, assays $35.00 per ton; grey copper, carrying gold and copper which assays $40.00, and silver galena worth $25.00.

The company has been incorporated and a limited amount of the stock has been set aside for development purposes and Messrs. Hughes and Johnson are now engaged in disposing of this stock. Development work is going ahead this winter and the company hopes to be sending ore to the smelter before many months and to be receiving handsome returns for their labor and enterprise.

How to Cure Croup. Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia, Dutchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the Cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by The Hudson Pharmacy—C. W. Crossfield, mgr.
