SERVANT PROBLEM IN LONDON.

Men Being Imported to Take the Place of Women Domestics.

Of late London has despaired of solving the "servant girl problem," and has disfiguring cruptions and the most approved means of set about importing men to take the getting rid of this trouble is to take Vogeler's Curative places of women in housework. They are bringing them across the channel by the shipload, and the servant girl is rapidly disappearing, from the London household.

They call these male servants "generals," and there is no part of housework that they cannot do, from pressing my lord's trousers to combing my lady's hair. These "generals" get wages ranging from $50 to $300 a year. They are civil, clean and neat, and are accustomed to long hours.

This fresh field of labor especially appeals to the young man of continental Europe, as it gives him a chance to escape from army conscription. So far these men have proved themselves es-

SURGERY IN THE SOUDAN.

Good surgeons are often men of great A ingenuity, and there are numerous cases on record of important and wholly satisfactory results accomplished with rude appliances. A writer who was with the British army in the Soudan, gives, in a New York paper, this illustration of a clever adaptation of means to a desired end: After the Battle of Omdurman we rought back to Abadieh 121 wounded officers and men. Of this number there were twenty-one cases of which an accurate diagnosis could not be made by ordinary surgical means.

By the help of the Roentgen raya, however, we found the bullet or proved Its absence in twenty out of these twenty-one cases, the remaining case being so ill with a severe wound in the lung that it was not considered justifiable to examine him at the time. Of course we had no steam engine to generate electricity for us, and the desert heat had dissolved our specially prepared candles into their constituents. Necessity, however, is the mother of leather-strap with the rear wheel of a sandem bicycle. Having carefully adfusted the circuit with the storage battery, and also with the voltmeter and ammeter, a warrant officer took his position on the seat of the bloycle and commenced pedaling. When fifteen volts and fourteen amperes were registered, the switch close to the handle of the blevele was opened and the charging of the battery begun.

As the resistance became greater a sensation as of riding up-hill was experienced by the man on the seat, and the services of an additional orderly were regulationed for the front seat of the tandem. As this bicycle practice was generally machine brought to a standstill.
