No Mice on Papa Little.
Mice cannot exist on Papa Little, an island in St. Magnus bay, on the west of Shetland. To test the truth of this, several mice, at various times, were brought here, but the soil proved so unpropitious that they soon died.—Exchange.

SORES AND ULCERS.
Sores and Ulcers never become chronic unless the blood is in poor condition—it is sluggish, weak and unable to throw off the poisons that accumulate in it. The system must be relieved of the unhealthy matter through the bowels, and great danger to life would follow should it be held before the blood has been made pure and healthy and all impurities eliminated from the system. S.S.S. begins the cure by first cleansing and invigorating the blood, building up the general health and removing from the system all morbid, effeminate matter.

A CONSTANT DRAIN UPON THE SYSTEM.
When this has been accomplished the discharge gradually ceases, and the sore or ulcer heals. It is the tendency of the old blood to grow worse and worse, and eventually to destroy the bones. Local applications, while soothing and to some extent alleviating pain, cannot reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. does, and no matter how apparently hopeless your condition, even though your constitution has broken down, it will bring relief when nothing else can. It supplies the rich, pure blood necessary to heal the sore and nourish the debilitated, diseased body.

A STUDY IN SCARLET.
BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

PART I.
Being a reprint from the reminiscences of John H. Watson, M. D., late of the army medical department.

CHAPTER I.
In the year 1878 I took my degree of Doctor of Medicine of the University of London and proceeded to Netley to go through the course prescribed for surgeons in the army.
Having completed my studies there, I was duly attached to the Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers as assistant surgeon. The regiment was stationed in India at the time, and before I could join it the second Afghan war had broken out.

On landing at Bombay I learned that my corps had advanced through the passes and was already deep in the enemy's country.
I followed, however, with many other officers who were in the same situation as myself, and succeeded in reaching Candahar in safety, where I found my regiment, and at once entered upon my new duties.
The campaign brought honors and promotion to many, but for me it had nothing but disaster and misfortune. I was removed from my brigade and attached to the Berkshires, with whom I served at the fatal battle of Maiwand.

There I was struck on the shoulder by a Jezail bullet, which shattered the bone and grazed the subclavian artery. I should have fallen into the hands of the murderous Ghazis had it not been for the courage and devotion shown by Murray, my orderly, who threw me across a pack horse and succeeded in bringing me safely into the British lines.
Worn with pain and weak from the prolonged hardships which I had undergone, I was removed, with a great train of wounded sufferers, to the base hospital at Peshawur.
Here I rallied, and had already improved so far as to be able to walk about the wards, and even to bask a little on the veranda, when I was struck down by enteric fever, that curse of our Indian possessions.
For months my life was despaired of, and when at last I came to myself and became convalescent, I was so weak and emaciated that a medical board determined that not a day should be lost in sending me back to England.

I was dispatched accordingly in the troopship Orontes, and landed a month later on Portsmouth jetty, with my health irrevocably ruined, but with permission from a paternal government to spend the next nine months in attempting to improve it.
I had neither kith nor kin in England, and was therefore as free as air—or as free as an income of eleven shillings and sixpence a day will permit a man to be.
Under such circumstances I naturally gravitated to London, that great cesspool into which all the loungers and idlers of the empire are irresistibly drained.
There I stayed for some time at a private hotel in the Strand, leading a comfortable, meaningless existence and spending such money as I had considerably more freely than I ought.
So alarming did the state of my finances become, that I soon realized that I must either leave the metropolis and rusticate somewhere in the country or that I must make a complete alteration in my style of living.
Choosing the latter alternative, I began by making up my mind to leave the hotel and take up my quarters in some less pretentious and less expensive domicile.
On the very day that I had come to this conclusion, I was standing at the Criterion bar, when some one tapped me on the shoulder, and, turning round, I recognized young Stamford, who had been a dresser under me at Bart's.

ation for blood corpuscles. The latter is valueless if the stains are a few hours old. Now, this appears to act as well whether the blood is old or new. Had this test been invented there are hundreds of men now walking the earth, who would long ago have paid the penalty of their crimes."

"Indeed!" I murmured.
"Criminal cases are continually hinging on that one point. A man is suspected of a crime months perhaps after it is committed. His linen or clothes are examined, and brownish stains discovered upon them. Are they blood-stains, or mudstains, or ruststains, or fruitstains, or what are they? There is a question which has puzzled many an expert; and why? Because there was no reliable test. Now we have the Sherlock Holmes test, and there will no longer be any difficulty."

His eyes fairly glittered as he spoke, and he put his hand over his heart and bowed as if to some applauding crowd jostled up in his imagination.
"You are to be congratulated," I remarked, considerably surprised at his enthusiasm.
"There was the case of Von Bischoff at Frankfurt last year. He would certainly have been hung had this test been in existence. Then there was the case of Muller, and Lafevre, of Montpelier, and Samard, of New Orleans. I could name a score of cases in which it would have been decisive."

"You seem to be a waiting calendar of crime," said Stamford, with a laugh.
"You might start a paper on those lines. Call it the 'Police News of the Past.'"
"Very interesting reading it might make, too," remarked Sherlock Holmes, sticking a small piece of plaster over the prick on his finger. "I have to be careful," he continued, turning to me with a smile, "for I dabble with poisons as a good deal."

He held out his hand as he spoke, and I noticed that it was all mottled over with similar pieces of plaster and discolored with strong acids.
"We came here on business," said Stamford, sitting down on a three-legged stool and pushing another one in my direction with his foot. "My friend here wants to take diggings, and as you were complaining that you could go no one to go halves with you, I thought that I had better bring you together."

(To Be Continued.)
BRIEF BUT KILLING.

Remedy Was Not Recommended, But Was Very Effective in Its Way.
A recent West Philadelphia political meeting was marked by the telling of the following story as illustrative of the evil of being too laconic in everyday speech. Beverly was the distinguished character of the village where he lived Jim and Zach, farmers, and each the owner of a horse. They met one day and spoke as follows, relates the Philadelphia Times:

"Mornin', Jim!"
"Mornin', Zach!"
"What did you give your horse for the bottle?"
"Turpentine."
"Good mornin'!"
"Good mornin'!"
They again encountered each other a few days later, with this result:
"Mornin', Jim!"
"Mornin', Zach!"
"What did you say you gave your horse for the bottle?"
"Turpentine."
"Killed mine."
"Mine, too."
"Good mornin'!"
"Good mornin'!"

Satisfied, Anyhow.
"Maria," said the colored citizen, "I feel lak my time has come at las'; I is mighty low."
"Ain't yo' been eatin' de cunnel's watermillions?"
"Oh, yes."
"Well, didn't yo' know he done pizened de las' one er dem?"
"Did he pizen um?"
"He sho' did."
"Dat settles me. But, Maria—"
"What do you want?"
"I wuz all day at um, en I eat nine befo' I quit."—Atlanta Constitution.

Almost True.
"Now," commenced the attorney for the green goods men, "it is stated that when you discovered that the tin box held snuff that you exploded with laughter. How do you reconcile this statement with your claim that you were inflamed with wrath?"
"It ain't exactly the facts, judge," said the plaintiff. "I acknowledge that I was busted, but I deny that I laughed."—Baltimore American.

And Yet, Why Not Make 'Em Happy.
