

THE CONDON GLOBE.

THURSDAY AUGUST 6, 1903.

PORTAGE ROAD, HARD HIT.

The much desired State Portage Railway project, a stunning blow on the solar plexus last Friday at a conference held in the office of the president of the O. R. & N. Co. between the state officials who comprise the portage road commission and those of the O. R. & N. Co. President Mohler did the knock-out act by a clever swing which landed fairly on the State's wind and temporarily, if not finally, put the portage out of business.

The situation was held for the purpose of arranging with the railroad company for right of way for the State project but when Mr. Mohler, with a bland smile, remarked that his company had no mind to spare along the Columbia, in the vicinity of Galloway rapids, it gave the governor and his party a feeling which was somewhat akin to that which comes to the average landsman when, for the first time, he crosses the Columbia river bar. They felt sick, but it is probable they will have plenty of time to get straightened up again before being called upon to commence the actual work of building the portage road.

This situation was to be expected. The O. R. & N. Co. has never been reckoned as a particularly warm friend of the portage road for the reason that the object of the portage is supposed to be the regulation of freight rates. The O. R. & N. Co. has had considerable experience in the freight rate business and therefore, no doubt feels perfectly competent to continue to fix the price which the people of Oregon must pay for transportation.

Governor Chamberlain has announced that the State will at once commence proceedings to condemn the right of way but it is altogether probable that when this is accomplished the amount of damage awarded the railroad company will be high enough to eat up most of the appropriation and leave nothing with which to build and equip the portage road.

The situation is not encouraging to the people of the Inland Empire but, to quote from the words of the late lamented Jay Gould, "the people be damned." The wheat growers and other producers, felt quite jubilant over the prospects of cheaper freight rates but their interests are as nothing when weighed in the balances against the wishes of the greatest and most powerful corporation in the state.

President Mohler and the other railroad people, are not to be blamed, either. They are simply looking after their own interests as the farmers and all other classes of people are supposed to be doing. The only trouble is that in Oregon, as in all other states, the railroad companies, and other big concerns, are bigger than the State and the people who compose the State and a peculiar feature of the whole matter is that the people who do the kicking about the railroads doing as they please with their own property, charging what they please for hauling passengers and freight and successfully opposing any project which is calculated to interfere with their business or curtail their profits are the same people who have permitted, and are still permitting, such a condition of affairs to exist.

"INQUIRER" No; Quong, the Chinese murderer who hanged himself at Heppner last week was not insane. He had been told that it would be necessary to put him in jail at Fossil for a short time until the Gilliam county jail was made ready and rather than attempt to endure the ennui of existence in such a notoriously quiet town he chose a speedy death. Quong had been in the mountains herding sheep for a year or so and after the excitement and bustle of that sort of life he feared a sudden transition to a perfectly quiet, peaceful, monotonous existence would be more than he could bear. A drummer just from Fossil says Quong showed remarkable judgment.

A FIRST-CLASS SNAP.

If anybody asks you just tell 'em that running a country newspaper is the only strictly first-class snap what am. All a fellow has to do is to be able to write poetry, discuss the tariff—and make believe to understand it—empire a ball game satisfactorily to both teams, report a wedding, split wood, describe a fire in lurid language, make a dollar go as far as ten, shine at a dance, speak in the weekly prayer meeting, abuse the liquor traffic, test and puff whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, defend bimetallism, snore at snobbery, wear diamonds, overlook scandal, print all the news, suppress everything that somebody don't want published, see beauty in every baby and say so, describe every gown at a reception in such a way as to make every woman who was present think that you thought—and made the world believe—that she was the most killing, splendidest, sweetest creature there. He must also delight pumpkin raisers minister to the afflicted, heal the disgruntled, boost all office seekers, retain his self respect and keep from getting shot or going broke.

A young humorist over in Sherman county got off the following original effort on a recent Friday evening during the "speaking" exercises at a district school: Jane ate cake and Jane ate jelly, Jane went to bed with a pain in her— Now don't get excited, Don't be misled, For what Jane had was a pain in her head. The outcome of the story was so different from what was expected half way through that the boy didn't get licked.

To an ordinary outside observer it begins to look as though the Portland holdups have formed a trust which in turn has gone into a merger with the police force. The two thugs who thrashed the cop the other night must have been scabs.

Some liars are born. Others get there by long continued practice.
