

THE CONDON GLOBE.

THURSDAY OCTOBER 8, 1903.

TALK IS CHEAP.

Talk is cheap but it takes money to buy whisky. Likewise it takes money to build railroads.

Gilliam county has had a flood of railroad propositions lately and yet the people are not satisfied. The people want a railroad, not a whirlwind of hot air.

But the people are not able to build a railroad themselves. Neither are they able to invest in a large amount of railroad securities. The people here are mostly farmers, not bond buyers. Neither are the people willing to tie up a right of way for a term of years unless they know, absolutely, that the people to whom they grant it are able to build a road, that they intend to build and that they will build at once.

Without questioning the sincerity of the gentleman who have been talking railroad here lately the Globe begs to suggest that, so far, none of them have attempted to make it clear to the people that they really mean business—that they can and will build the road within a year. The people of this county are all from Missouri on this sort of a project. Railroad promoters must "show them" that they can "promote" something besides sroccos.

The people want a railroad and they are willing to do anything in reason to secure one. But it is hardly reasonable to ask the people to subscribe for $150,000 of bonds or to give a 3-year right of way on the bare, bald assertion of one or two strangers that "We will build the road." Anybody can make promises but the promoter needs excellent backing to be able to make good.

The railroad promoter who will come to the citizens of Gilliam county with a clear cut business proposition, who will identify himself satisfactorily and show the people just what he means to do and can do, and business here. But he must cut out hot air and not think child's talk will fool all the people all the time.

It takes money to build railroads. It also requires some judgement and common sense.

THE COUNTRY PAPERS AND THE FAIR.

The Portland Telegram, when it has nothing else to write about, has fallen into the habit of taking up "certain country papers" and lambasting them on account of their alleged failure to print gratis, "certain" stuff that is being sent out by the state board of the Lewis and Clark fair. By so doing the Telegram is playing the role of a very cheap advocate. If employed by the commissioners it is hardly earning its money. If not employed, for the sake of the fair, it would better save its space.

The facts are, the "country papers" have done and are doing more than all other agencies combined for the 1905 fair. Without the support of the country press the half million appropriation for the enterprise would not have passed the last legislature. Because of the friendly disposition shown by the country press the board is not warranted in still not only asking space but dictating what shall go into that space. Beggers cannot be choosers. When Lydia Pinkham asks for space it is sold to her with the privilege of writing her own copy. The fair board has put the Lewis and Clark fair on the same plane with Lydia Pinkham's pills and an appeal is made to country papers, in sweet charity's name, to advertise their wares. If left alone the country papers will support the fair but they will do it in their own way. They are doing it now with scarcely an exception. What the papers object to is the stuff sent out and the time it is sent. It is the practice with the board to let the Portland papers have anything of a newsy nature that occurs in connection with the fair, and the secretary, who is not a newspaper man, is instructed to send the left over trash to the country papers and the country press is showing good judgement in rejecting it. News, not ancient history, is what the papers want, and if the state board of fair commissioners will furnish the country press with real live news at the same time it is given the metropolitan papers it will be accepted with thanks. The delayed, uninteresting stuff it has been sending out will continue to find its way into the waste basket.—Astorian.

GROWING WHEAT CHEAPLY

In the northern part of Perris valley, in California, two brothers are engaged in the wheat business on an extensive scale. They have 10,500 acres in crop this year and the yield, as reported by a local paper published in that locality is from 7 to 10 sacks, or almost 2 1/2 bushels, per acre. The farming and harvesting is all done on a large scale. An oil burning traction engine with an indicated horse power of 125 is the motive power employed and seven barrels of crude oil is consumed each day as fuel. This engine draws a big combined harvester through 80 to 100 acres of wheat every day during the harvest season leaving a trail of wheat sacks filled with golden grain ready for the market. Only seven men are required to operate this ponderous outfit. When the threshing season is over the engine is hitched to a gang of 96 disc plows and later in the season after the rains have come 56 regulation plows are used. This gang turns over about 200 acres a day and is often operated continuously, day and night.

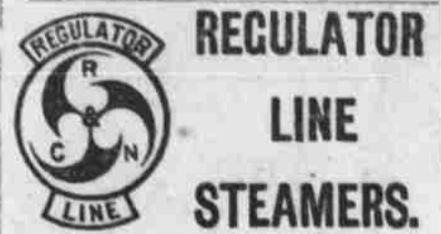

But the interesting feature of this method of farming lies in the economy with which it is done. It is said that an acre of land can be put in grain with the disc, for 7 cents and with the plows for 10 cents an acre, exclusive of seed, and the crop can be harvested for 60 cents an acre and when the work stops or is finished there are no hungry horses left to eat their heads off. This shows a remarkably cheap production of wheat—less than four cents per bushel.

Of course to farm in such a manner it is necessary to have large tracts of level land adapted to wheat growing but it is claimed by some authorities that there is, in California alone, sufficient wheat land of this character, if placed in cultivation under the most approved modern methods to produce enough wheat to supply the entire nation with bread. If this is true it is a matter of considerable interest to wheat growers in other states where the conditions are such that the cost of production is necessarily much greater than that indicated by the above figures. In Kansas for instance, it is said to cost about 40 cents to produce a bushel of wheat and in Eastern Oregon it costs perhaps half that amount. It can be readily seen that it will be an uphill business for the farmers of those states to compete with four cent wheat once there is a considerable number of these 10,000-acre farms opened up and put under steam power cultivation.

It is not altogether unreasonable to suppose that the next few years may witness the rise of a wheat magnate who will produce and control the wheat as absolutely as Rockefeller now produces and controls the oil. And the independent wheat grower would be put out of business as ruthlessly and as completely as the independent oil producer and refiners have been squelched in the years gone by, by John D. Rockefeller and his Standard Oil.
