CULTIVATE SOCIABILITY.

In his sermon last Sunday morning Rev. F. C. Flowers, of the Baptist church, touched on a subject which is of peculiar interest to every resident of Condon. It was in regard to the lack of social life in the town and the urgent need of a forward movement along that line. He deplored the lack of sociability in the churches and between the churches and among the people of the town generally and urged that all might unite in an effort to better the condition which now exists. Every man and woman who is properly balanced requires a certain amount of relaxation from their ordinary every day duties and this can best be found in proper social recreation which comes from a friendly mingling with our fellows. Commenting on the dearth of the social amenities here the speaker said that often since his residence in this place he has felt himself starving for the want of that sympathy and fellowship which can only be found in a friendly, social intercourse with our neighbors and friends and that the highest degree of success in church work is only possible where a spirit of sociability and friendship permeates the community. This is true, not only of church work but of every other line of endeavor including business and municipal affairs.

No greater truth was ever spoken from any pulpit and it is one which may be taken up and applied by every citizen whether church member or not. It is not only the duty but it is to the financial interest of every resident of a town to do all he can to cultivate a friendly feeling among his neighbors and associates. The town that is torn asunder on every proposition by countless cliques and factions and in which politics and creed and petty spite are allowed to govern our every action cannot prosper as it should. We are all, more or less, interdependent upon each other and if we desire to get the greatest good out of life we should get together, pull together, stay together and cultivate the social amenities and graces. The man who has no desire for social intercourse with his fellows must possess a cramped and narrow soul indeed and he who has that desire but not the opportunity to gratify it is to be pitied.

DEAD HEROES BEST.

The rather sudden collapse of Charles M. Schwab, erstwhile president of the steel trust and promoter of the shipping trust of unsavory memory shows how easy it is for newspapers and the public generally, to make fools of themselves in setting up every man who has acquired sudden wealth and notoriety as an example for the youth of the land to follow if they would become rich and good and great.

A year or two ago papers of the Success and Ladies' Home Journal class as well as many great dailies and small weeklies, filled their columns with fulsome praise of Schwab because, forsooth, it happened to suit the financial bosses of Wall street to make him president of their biggest trust for a season. He was set up on a towering pedestal like onto a Chinese joss and the youth of the land were seriously advised to take him as their example. Schwab's name was on every lip; Schwab's doings were dripping from the pencil point of every scribbler in the country. "He was, for the time being, a gorgeously painted tin god and all because he was reputed to draw a salary of $1,000,000 a year.

That the man was much over-estimated was shown by the fact that his head was not sufficiently well balanced to maintain its equipoise in the midst of this storm of flattery and foolishness. He soon became imbued with the belief that he was by far the biggest thing that

A Very Close Call. "I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale without any appetite and all ran down. As I was about to give up I got a bottle of Electric Bile, and after taking it I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Only 50c. Satis faction guaranteed by Condon Pharmacy.

ever happened in these United States. (The word "happened" is used advisedly.) He wanted to "cut a splurge" and so he went to Europe. He tackled Monte Carlo and lost; he traveled by special trains and private yachts and showy autos and left no stone unturned to attract attention to the "American Steel King." And the people fell down and worshipped him as did the Israelites of old worship the golden calf. He was the hero of the hour because he was president of the steel trust and reputed to draw a salary of $1,000,000 a year.

But now that he has lost his job his name is "mud" he has lost his standing in the world and were it not for an occasional investigation of some of his collapsed schemes in which he has called upon to testify his name would not appear in the papers once in a year. He went up like sky rocket and he came down like a stick. And the youth of the country who began to mould their lives after his pattern are left without a model. It is very sad.

It is never safe to worship a living hero. One can never tell what curious trait a living man may develop. He may "go wrong" and land in jail or lose his money or get involved in a divorce suit. Dead heroes are "dead safe." Their record is all behind them and they can't change it. Aspiring young men who are looking for a model would better stay with George Washington, Abraham Lincoln or Bill Nye.

Cut out living trust magnates. Schwab has proven that while in the flesh they are not safe to tie to.

HIGH WHEAT AT CHICAGO.

The recent advance in the price of wheat at Chicago does not seem to be ascribed to the ordinary rule of supply and demand. Other factors have been at work, and the rise is said to be due to the manipulations of the Armour interests and to war talk. So far as local conditions in Chicago are concerned, therefore, there may be some doubts as to whether the present advance will be permanent.

The probability of war becomes more remote every day, which ordinarily would have a tendency to bring prices down. But markets never are under normal conditions when there is war or rumors of war. The Chicago Record-Herald said recently that it was not possible to show logically why a war in the orient should greatly affect prices of breadstuffs. But the developments of war are never logical. The effect on prices of the war with Spain was a way beyond expectations. The world becomes emotional in such a case and there is no anticipating what its effect on speculators might be.

Eliminating the action of the Armours and their large holdings, and also the war talk, there are widely differing views as to the prospect. The northwestern grain men expect higher prices, and one prophesies that there will be a pinch before the season is over. The speculative view at Chicago is said to be the other way—not much stock being taken in the theory of prospective scarcity. And with less talk of war there is all the greater assurance of the establishment of normal conditions.—Spokesman-Review.

It is worth something to live in Oregon. Those who have been here for years become so accustomed to comfortable weather the year around that they fail to appreciate in how great a measure they are blessed. When, on the 26th day of January, however, while enjoying warm sunshine and balmy breezes we read of the suffering and deaths in the east due to the caprices of old Boreas, we can more fully appreciate our climate.

A Prisoner in Her Own House.

Mrs. W. H. Layha, of 1001 Agnes Ave., Kansas City, Mo., has for several years been troubled with severe hoarseness and at times a hard cough which she says "would keep me in doors for days. I was prescribed for by physicians with no noticeable results. A friend gave me one of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with instructions to close my mouth and breathe through my nose, following the directions and I wish to state that after the first day I could not get a decided change for the better, and at this time after using it for two weeks have no hesitation in saying I realize that I am entirely cured." This remedy is for sale by Condon Pharmacy.
