FORGERS CAUSE SCARE

Many Executed in 1818 for Making

Fraudulent Bank Notes. At the beginning of the last century there was a very flourishing trade in England which the establishment of free trade undoubtedly belped to destroy, says the Liverpool Post. We refer to the manufacture of Bank of England notes. In the first decade of the century this industry reached very large proportions, and it was supported and encouraged by the skill of firstrate continental artists. The matter was brought up in parliament, and the commons ordered a return to be made of the total value of the forged notes presented at the Bank of England for payment, and refused, from being forged, for the 11 years from the 1st of January, 1801, to the 81st of December. 1811. This return, which is before us, runs: "The nominal value of the forged notes presented for payment, and refused, within the above-mentioned period is £131,61 - H. Hase, chief cashier. N. B .- The above return includes all forged notes supposed to have been fabricated on the continent and presented within this pe-

Parliamentary inquiry had no effect in diminishing the crime, for the Bidwell and Fauntieroy forgeries soon followed, and every fortnight in 1818-on an average—there was an execution in England for forgeries of bank notes, and in 1820 more than 100 forgers were convicted. But such crimes as these could hardly have created a greater scare in Threadneedle street, however, than the announcement a few years ago that somebody had succeeded in accomplishing a very simple scientific feat. It became known that a bank note had been split in two and the authorities were aghast lest the world should be flooded with duplicate notes. The splitting of the note had undoubtedly been accomplished quite honestly and without evil intent and the man who split it was frank enough to let the bank know that he had done so.

A long correspondence passed beween the bank and the man with the secret and at last a test was decided upon, a Bank of England note being sent to the inventor for experimenting upon. The bank received it back in and for a moment the scare seemed to have become more real. But only for a moment. Closer examination brought back confidence. The test had shown the possibility of splitting the note, but it proved, too, the impossibility of passing the second half, the printing on which was too faint to pass. It transpired that the method

When the glue was dry the sion of the paper to the cloth being greater than the adhesion of the paper itself, the two sides of the note adhered to the cloth. On being dampened the paper and the callco were again separated and there were two bank notes where only one had been before.

PET CROW MARKS THE TIME

Mocks the Cuckoo as the Hours Are Passing Swiftly By.

George Wreake, of Sibley Township. near Le Seur, Minn., has a pet crow, Bob, which has been with him for four years, and which he claims is the most intelligent and useful bird living. There is in the Wreake home an old heirloom, a beautiful cuckoo clock, brought from Switzerland in pioneer days, one of the kind that have a little door at the top in front, out of which aprings a little bird every sixty minutes and calls the hours with a "cuckoo" for each unit of the hour.

After the crow had been in the family about two years he began to mock the clock cuckoo, and this finally grew to be a passion with him, so that he hardly ever failed to give a melodious "caw" when the clock cuckoo was calling the hour. Some six months ago, by reason of an accident to the shelf on which it was standing, the clock fell and the striking, or cuckoo, part was completely broken, so the door never opens and the bird never comes out. This appeared to be a great puxzle to Bob, for he watched the clock for several days and seemed to be studying deeply. At last, however, he came to a conclusion and greatly startled the family by taking up the duty the cuckoo had previously performed, and counting out the hours perfectly at the exact moment with a clear call of "caw" for each hour the clock ought to have struck, one for 1 o'clock, five for 5 o'clock, and so on around the circle. He has kept up his work to the present time and calls every hour when he can see the face of the clock, as regularly and perfectly as an ordinary timepiece with its hammer and

If a lamp is set at night where the light falls on the face of the clock, the crow, though he will doze between times on his perch, will waken and call every hour all night long. More than this, if a lamp be kept lighted and a pin be thrust into the wooden face of the clock so that the minute hand will pass over it but the hour hand will catch on it and stop the clock at any hour of the morning, between 4 and 7 o'clock, Bob will notice it as soon as the clock stops and raise a shrill cawing that is as good as an alarm clock, and keep it up till some one gets up and comes and removes the pin.-Minneapolis Times.

Use for Worn-Out Rubber.

that so many uses had been discovered for the hog that when he was killed nothing about him was lost but his ing tangible is lost.

Worn-out rubber, like worn-out silver, is something that does not exist

Ever since the advent of bicycles heavily on the world's rubber supply, and ever since the hundred and one uses to which rubber is put in connection with electricity, the material has become more and more scarce and valuable, so that even the old rubber shoe and the worn-out rubber boot may throw out their chests in pride at being worth really something. Nothing containing rubber is discarded nowadays. The old rubber coat over which the spring tires of a motor car may run on a country road to-day may some day find a nesting place in the soft tresses of a woman's hair, after having been transformed into a handsome

Even vulcanized rubber, which, owing to the sulphuric process to which it was subjected, was formerly valueless, is now subject to a process which rejuvenates it and makes it fit to be worked up again for the purposes of the manufacturer. Immense quantitles of this product, which formerly was assigned to a rubbish heap, are now treated and admixed with a certain percentage of new gum, enough to cheapen the piece of most rubber goods turned out by the manufacturer to-day. Old rubber, however, can be used by itself without any addition of fresh gum, the process of treatment being a simple one.

Inoculation to prevent smallpox, diphtheria, rables, etc., we know about, but it is quite as mysterious as the inoculation of old wornout soils to make them fertile.

Certain germs make for fertility of the soil. They are collected or generated by the Department of Agriculture, according to this veracious authority, and sent by mail in a small package about like a yeast cake. Tho cake is said to contain millions of dried germs. It is thrown into a barrel of pure water and turns it a milky white. Seeds or grain and grasses are washed with this water and when planted are said to produce wonderful results even on what is regarded as exhausted soil. The land is really treated to an inoculation and cured of its disease of harrenness. Have your farm vaccinated and get rich from the big crops you will raise.—Minneapolis Journal.
