WHERE FARMING PAYS.

Like all other lines of business, farming pays best in a locality where the conditions are most favorable to its proper accomplishment. Soil, climate and markets are the three essential factors to be considered in selecting a location where the farmer may reasonably expect to receive a substantial reward for his investment and labor. The presence of all three of these things will insure success in return for the intelligent effort of any farmer while the absence of any one of them may doom to failure the best efforts of the most intelligent, industrious and progressive tiller of the soil. It is, therefore, a matter of much importance to the prospective settler, who is already here or who may come later in the season to make his home in Oregon, that he should make a wise selection before investing his money in a farm and it is for the purpose of directing the attention of such persons to the advantages which Gilliam county has to offer that this article is written.

Gilliam county, today, offers exceptional advantages to the settler. Her soil is rich, productive and easily farmed. Her climate is moderate and equable; well suited to the production of grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables, and her market is the Orient whose millions of subjects are just beginning to cultivate a taste for Oregon flour, Oregon fruits and other Oregon products.

Gilliam county is no longer a cow county nor a backwoods settlement. The completion of the railroad to Condon, which is now a question of but a few weeks, will place every acre of tillable land in the county within easy reach of the markets of the world and will give the farming industry an impetus that will astonish many conservative residents. Farming has paid in Gilliam county in the past even with a wagon haul of from 40 to 60 miles to the railroad and it will certainly pay better with a railroad practically at every farmer's front gate. The farmer will be benefitted directly in two ways: First in the big saving of the long wagon haul to the O. R. & N., and second in the time formerly put in on the road which can now be devoted to the better cultivation of the land and to increased acreage. The latter proposition, prominent farmers say, is the more important of the two for the reason that with improved methods of cultivation the yield per acre will be almost double and the productive value of the land conserved and increased.

That farming pays in this county may be readily shown by citing a few things that have been done in the past:

A well known farmer of Mayville precint, recently stated to the writer that on two different occassions within the last few years he has purchased a tract of land and paid for it from the proceeds of the first crop.

In the same neighborhood, last year, a farmer marketed his crop from a large tract and after deducting the expenses of harvesting and threshing he found that it netted him a trifle more than $19 per acre.

Numerous men may be found in the county today whose assets when they came here a few years ago consisted of a team and a homestead right and are now in comfortable circumstances—many of them wealthy.

What man has done man can do and with better conditions as regards the transportation of his product to the market he should, and and no doubt will, do better than his predecessors have done.

Farming pays in Gilliam county because it is a farming country; because it possesses the three requirements for success: soil, climate and markets, and this proposition should be brought to the attention of every homeseeker and tourist who comes to Oregon during the next few months, and it should be kept there until every one of them understand it and realize it fully. The county needs the people to develop its latent resources; the people need the homes and opportunities the county has to offer and it is up to the resident business men now in the county to introduce these two interests and get them acquainted.

A Favorite Remedy for Babies.

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds and prevents any danger of pneumonia or other serious consequences. It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears will prevent the attack. For sale by Condon Drug Co.

Jacobs, a Portland horse buyer, was here during the week looking for heavy horses. He only succeeded in buying six or seven head, his price not being sufficiently high to induce many to part with their best animals. Horsemen assert that good horses are worth as much right here in Condon as they are on the Portland market.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

William Shaffer, a brakeman of Dennison, Ohio, was confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. "I used many remedies," he said. "Finally I sent to McCaw's drug store for a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, at which time I was unable to use hand or foot, and in one week's time was able to go to work as happy as a clam."
