

That Tired Feeling

is a Common Spring Trouble.

It's a sign that the blood is deficient in vitality, just as pimples and other eruptions are signs that the blood is impure.

It's a warning, too, which only the hazardous fail to heed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove it, give new life, new courage, strength and animation.

They cleanse the blood and clear the complexion.

Accept no substitute.

"I felt tired all the time and could not sleep. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a while I could sleep well and the tired feeling had gone. This great medicine has also cured me of scrofula." Mrs. C. M. Boor, Gilead, Conn.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Some of the Caustic Retorts Made by the Famous Wit.

When a prosy old bore stopped Douglas Jerrold, who was hurrying on urgent business along Regent street, with the question, "Well, Jerrold, my dear boy, what is going on?" "I am," retorted Jerrold, shooting past like an arrow from a bow.

Also to contribute to a third subscription which was being got up for a reckless grub street writer, Jerrold cried impatiently, "How much does the fellow want this time?" "Well, this time I think just four and two naughts will put him straight." "Put me down for one of the naughts!"

A lawyer, replying to the toast of his health drunk at a dinner of artists, stammered out that he did not expect the honor, as law could hardly be considered one of the arts, whereupon Jerrold interjected one word only, "Black!"

A clergyman who was indecorously and uncharitably denouncing the poor for the number of children they bred wound up with the opinion that the real evil of the times was "the surplus population." Jerrold nodded a hearty assent. "Certainly, the surplus population!"

"There's one song in the Prodigue," cried a musical bore to Jerrold, "which always carries me away." "Would I could sing it!" ejaculated Jerrold.

TORMENTING RHEUMATISM

Columbus, Ohio, May 20, 1903.

Six years ago I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism. I was laid up in bed for six months, and the doctors I had did me no good. They changed medicines every week and nothing they prescribed seemed to help me. Finally I began the use of S. S. S. My knee and elbow joints were swollen terribly, and at one time my joints were so swollen and painful that I could not close them when opened. I was so bad that I could not move knee or foot. I was getting discouraged, you may be sure, when I began S. S. S., but as I saw it was helping me I continued it, and to-day I am a sound well man and have never had a return of the disease. S. S. S. purified my blood and cured me of this severe case of Rheumatism after everything else had failed. I have recommended it to others with good results.

R. H. CHAPMAN.

1355 Mt. Vernon Ave.

The poisonous acids that produce the inflammation and pain are absorbed into the blood and Rheumatism can never be conquered till these are neutralized and filtered out of the blood and system. S. S. S. goes directly into the circulation and attacks the disease itself. It purifies and restores the blood to a healthy, vigorous condition. It contains no potash, alkali or other strong minerals, but is guaranteed entirely vegetable. Write us and our physicians will advise without any charge whatever. Our book on Rheumatism sent free.

OLD KUROPATKIN COULD FIGHT

Treated Lumbermen to the Finest Battle They Had Ever Seen.

If black bears keep on increasing at the present rate in this section of Pennsylvania farmers in the remotest sections will have to give up raising pigs and apples, says a Williamsport (Pa.) correspondent of the Philadelphia Record. Wolves, even in pioneer days never made such trouble for the settlers as these bears are making.

One evening recently a full-grown bear came down off the mountains and stalked through the village of Farandaville. He passed within fifty feet of the store of W. T. Young, which was brilliantly lighted. Here he confronted Misses Young, Mabel Smith and Annie Jobson, three young women who were on their way to the post office, and scared them almost out of their wits. Three shrieks of fright and poor bruin off flying and before me or dogs could be got together he was a mile away. Later, not half a mile from Farandaville, a smaller bear was seen in a cornfield.

The crew of the E. W. Kelly lumber camp on Hicks run have captured four black bears and bear steaks and pot pie are getting to be wearisome. They had an experience the other night though, that furnished excitement enough for all winter. A big old bear had been loading around the camp and because of his elusiveness the men dubbed him "Old Kuropatkin." Finally, however, he was caught in an old fashioned log trap a mile from camp. That night the whole crew, twenty-five men, with the four camp dogs and several coils of rope, went in force to capture bruin alive. "We'll get 'Old Kuropatkin' or bust!" was the cry.

Kelly, as a matter of precaution, took his gun along. Flaming torches of pine illuminated the grounds, and when the bear caught sight of the dogs and the drove of men it went wild with anger. He had already gnawed one of the logs of the trap almost through and would have been free before morning. The plan was to cast two lassoes over the bear's head and thus lead him in inglorious capture to camp. They succeeded in getting the ropes over his head in short order, but when the trap was opened and the bear got out a thing occurred that the men had not reckoned on. The dogs made a rush for the bear and the bear made a dash for the dogs and the next few minutes saw one of the most terrific battles imaginable. The bear killed one of the dogs with a blow of his forepaw and when a second dog, Kelly's prize setter, got within reach of the crazed bear and was in danger of being crushed to death Mr. Kelly sent a ball into bruin's head. The woodsmen declare that that battle beat any "rough house" they ever saw.

AID TO INJURED ON RAILROADS.

Instructions to Employes Formulated by One Company.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in arranging for instructions to its employes in methods of administering first aid to its injured, has set a very commendable example to similar corporations, says the New York Herald. The need for such help to passengers is, considering the number of accidents on different lines of travel, too apparent to require any comment as to its urgency. Often for the want of prompt assistance in such cases many precious lives have been lost which otherwise might have been spared.

The hemorrhage from a torn or crushed limb, for instance, may prove fatal in a few moments, but may be properly arrested by the pressure of a bandaged pad to the wound or a constricting band above the bleeding point. The prostration from shock also requires prompt attention with stimulant, warmth and other restoratives. In either case no time is to be lost. The antiseptic dressing for wounds, although hardly possible to be absolutely perfect in all details, is a step in the right direction, as it will give the victims the best chances that can be afforded of escaping subsequent infection. While the sterile appliances are excellent in their way they are of minimum service when applied to unclean wounds by unwashed hands. It is not to be doubted, however, that the service will adapt itself to most of the exigencies that may arise and thus be of incalculable benefit to all concerned.

From a purely economic view the plan should appeal to all common carriers, for no better reasons than those which pertain to the lessening of damage suits and the saving of costly lives.

Pope Opposes Nepotism.

Pope Pius X. does not believe in nepotism. A brother of his is a postal clerk at Mantua, one of his sisters keeps a tavern at Riese, another does tailoring at Talzano, a third keeps a store. The two sisters who used to do his housekeeping followed him to Rome. They do not live in the Vatican, however, but have a few rooms in a quiet part of the city, where they do their own work. They cannot call on the Pope without previously notifying Bisleti, the maestro di casa.

The Man with the Ho! Ho!

I love the ringing of music of a cheery, hearty laugh.

For it rouses the lumps of worry as the breezes scatter chaff.

And there's not a scene of gladness known to mortals here below

But is made a little gladder by a merry ho! ho! ho!

For merriment's a singer, and laughter is his song.

And where the singer singeth the happy angels throng.

For in all celestial anthems nothing sweeter is, I trow.

Than the melody that lures in a ho! ho! ho! ho!

You are feeling rather weary—'tis an oft-recorded tale—

And you fancy trouble's demons all are camping on your trail.

Till you meet the man of laughter, with his cheery ho! ho! ho!

And, some way, as you listen, all the haunting demons go!

Then you vow this old planet is a place of joy and cheer.

And there's pleasure in reflecting that you now are living here

And you wouldn't for a fortune lose your grip on things below—

All because you hear the music of a ringing ho! ho! ho!

Two angels walk upon the earth, walk daily to and fro.

The one is clad in robes of white, the one in garb of woe.

The voice of one is laughter; the other's is a sigh.

Joy is the one; the other woe; for souls of men they vie.

And the one comes running, running, summoned by the witching spell

Of the rippling notes of laughter that the spirit's rapture tell.

While the other straight is driven from the souls it haunts below

By the ringing and the singing of a ho! ho! ho! ho! ho!

We all love the music of a cheery, hearty laugh—

To spirits bowed with trouble 'tis a heaven-given staff—

But our burdens seem so heavy as we pass them in review

That we often let another do the laughing we should do.

At any rate, it's so with me, for I'm of brittle clay.

And haply it is so with you, although I do not say.

And so, perchance, you'll join with me, this one bouquet to throw

To the man who brings us blessings with his ho! ho! ho! ho! ho!

—New York Times.

Macaroni Wheat.

The Misuse of "Quite."

"Quite" strictly means "completely" and is rightly used in such sentences as "The flower is quite faded." Its secondary meaning, "very," "to a great extent," has the authority of good writers, though such expressions as "quite young" and "quite hot" have a colloquial ring about them. There is, however, springing up of late the slovenly practice of employing the adverb "quite" with a noun—e. g., "quite a panic ensued." If an adverb can modify a noun, where is the distinction between adverb and adjective? As a matter of fact, the functions of the adverb seem to be encroaching on those of the adjective.—London Review.

Napoleon's Idea of Journalism.

The worst recommendation that any man could have in Napoleon's eyes was to be a newspaper writer. Shortly after the 18th Brumaire, Table de l'Arade, who was always a favorite with the Emperor, solicited an appointment for one of his acquaintances.

"What has he done?" asked Napoleon. "He has been a journalist, a censorer, a giver of advice, a regent of sovereigns, a tutor of nations. The Biceyre is the fittest place for people of that stamp." Suppose Napoleon lived to-day, with his every thought anticipated in the newspapers! Some good newspaper advice might have saved him in the Russian campaign and later at Waterloo.—New York Press.

That's a Fact.

"Capital and labor should go hand in hand," remarked the moralizer. "True," rejoined the demoralizer, "but the trouble is too many men are trying to get capital without labor."

By counting the hairs on a square inch of the human scalp, a Frenchman has estimated that the number of hairs on the head of the average man is 127,920.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
