L. R. Webster, county judge of Multnomah county, is drafting a bill which will be presented at the next session of the Legislature, providing for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for county roads. This money, according to the terms of the bill, is to be apportioned in sums of $33,000 for each county when the county appropriates an equal sum. There is perhaps no bill that is to be presented for the consideration of our law making body that is more worthy of support and favorable consideration than that which is now being drafted by the Multnomah county judge. Good county roads are not a luxury but an absolute necessity. Every dollar invested in that direction brings back the principle with compound interest and marks the social, intellectual and financial progress of the community.

The fact that eleven players were killed and 104 seriously injured during the football season this fall has been made the subject for many lengthy editorials denouncing the game as brutal and crying for legislation that will forever put an end to the useless taking of human life in this manner. The press of the country is doubtless justly indignant but it seems rather strange that other evils such as patent medicines and quack doctors do not arouse the indignation of the editors. It is an established fact that thousands of people are killed every month by quackery and the newspapers through which they advertise their poisons are made the medium for this gross imposition upon the public. Perhaps their indignation is softened and cooled by the blood money that comes into their hands through the advertisements. It wouldn't pay to tell their readers the truth about their best patrons; it wouldn't be business, but no one can deny that it would be more creditable.

The Congress on Uniform Divorce Laws, meeting in deferred session in Philadelphia on the 13th to consider a bill drafted by its committee appointed last March, ended its work on the 14th, after adopting with but few changes the bill proposed by the committee. The committee will remain in existence in order to use its efforts to induce the different States to adopt the bill, thereby obtaining as far as possible uniform divorce laws throughout the United States.

"Love is a delusion and a snare. It should have no place in the hearts of men and women," says a Chicago professor. Wonder who jilted the old fellow.

The increase of ten per cent in the wages of the employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has occasioned much comment by the press of the country and is regarded by many of the largest and most reliable newspapers as worthy of commendation. We believe, however, that the action of the railroad company was hardly inspired by the best of motives. It occurs to us that perhaps the Pennsylvania system is well aware that one of the live issues of the next presidential campaign will be that of a more rigid regulation and control of our great trunk lines. Perhaps the railroads are also aware that public sentiment is against them and that a combination of the shippers or middle men and the laboring classes will present an impregnable front against them unless the laboring men are given some incentive to stay with the railroads as against the shippers. The increase in wages is nothing more or less than a club to hold over the employes at election time. By threats of a decrease in wages in case freight rates are reduced, the railroads fondly hope to keep their employes in line, but perhaps the employes are wise enough to know that reduced freight rates would also reduce the cost of living. They are perhaps also aware that the reduction in freight rates would be even more advantageous to them than the increased ten per cent in their wages. If they look at it in this light, the little railroad game will be rather costly to themselves and be profitable to their employes.
