

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Tom O. Pullen of Lone Rock was a Condon visitor the first of the week.

The sidewalk which was ordered built east from the corner of Hunt's hardware store is nearly completed.

The Mount Hood Saloon has again changed hands, Mr. Conser selling out to Reratt & Raper of Hood River. Both gentlemen have had considerable experience in the saloon business, Mr. Reratt having formerly conducted a saloon in Hood River. Mr. Conser is as yet undecided as to what business he will engage in, but will probably leave Condon.

Mason Ebbert has got a new Mitchell wagon with low wheels and two inch tire. He bought it of Hunt, The Hardware Man who has more wagons to sell.

Joseph Frizell recently bought C. A. Danneman's cattle—about 200 head—and is wintering them and 100 more in the straw fields in the Clem neighborhood. When spring opens, Mr. Frizell intends to take all his cattle to Lake county, where outside range is abundant, though water scarce. He spent two months in Lake county last fall looking over the ground, and came to the conclusion that it is a much better place for a man with a large band of cattle than this. Mr. Danneman has gone to Corvallis to spend the winter with his family.—Fossil Journal.

The way the new subscriptions have been pouring into this office of late shows that the people of Gilliam county are beginning to realize that they cannot keep posted on everything in county news without reading the leading county paper.

Mrs. Tom Boyd of this city went to Condon Friday, where she will visit with her husband who is located on the Condon-Arlington branch railroad.—The Dalles Chronicle. Mr. Boyd is taking the place of Conductor Mahaffey, who is enjoying a month's vacation in Western Oregon.

Miss Della Randall, of Olex is visiting in McMinnville and will spend a month with her sister, Mrs. Guy Nott.—McMinnville Register.

F. T. Hurlburt left Tuesday morning for Arlington where he attended the directors' meeting of the Arlington National Bank. He also attended the directors' meeting of French & Co.'s Bank in The Dalles on Wednesday.

Mrs. E. A. Wallace of Montavilla visited this week with her daughter, Mrs. Carl McCarty.

Floyd Moore made this office a pleasant call on Saturday last and subscribed for the Globe.

F. L. Bishop was in Condon last Saturday and while here subscribed for the Globe.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

Joint Session of I. O. O. F and Rebekah Lodges at Mayville. Condon Attends.

A large delegation of Rebekahs and Odd Fellows of this city went over to Mayville Saturday afternoon to participate in the joint installation of I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges of that place.

Those who attended from this city report a grand time, the program of the evening being especially interesting, and the way some of them speak the supper was a rare treat.

A delegation of the Mayville lodges will come to Condon tomorrow afternoon to attend the joint installation of the local lodges.

New Officers for First National

The annual directors' meeting of the First National Bank was held on Tuesday and the usual business was transacted. The usual dividend of 12 per cent was carried to surplus. A change was made in officers, J. Frank Watson retiring as president and also as one of the stockholders. Edward Dunn is now president; Andrew Greiner, vice-president; N. Farnsworth, cashier; F. M. Pliter and Wm. Wherli, directors.

The bank is now strictly a home bank. Further particulars can be found in their ad.

THE POTTED PLANT CLUB.

Makes a Hit in a Town Where Flowers Are Scarce.

Nobody in the neighborhood ever had such pretty plants as the Browns. Winter or summer there was always something a-bloom either in their garden or in their ample bay window facing the south. The neighbors got clip-plugs, borrowed seed and begged advice of Mrs. Brown, but never by any chance did they approximate her pleasing results.

Mrs. Biddle in the next block presented her with an unhealthy looking slip from her own dejected and falling white rosebush, and, lo, by the next season it was flourishing in leaves and bloom in the Brown garden, while the parent plant was dead and gone.

"There's a mystery about them plants of Mrs. Brown's," complained Mrs. Biddle. "Seems as if nobody could be more careful o' nothin' than I was o' that there white rosebush, seein' I slipped it often my fast husband's grave, but it jes' dwindled away, while the settin' I give her up an' grew as if bewitched."

Grandma White, who gave Mrs. Brown one of two struggling chrysanthemums purchased from an itinerant flower dealer, was also inclined to rate her success as something uncanny. One season only had Mrs. White's chrysanthemum struggled against its untimely doom; then it had fortuitously given up the ghost, while Mrs. Brown's chrysanthemum waxed great and put forth in season balls of white bloom.

Woes of the Window Gardener.

Early in the fall the windows of Hopeville always presented an attractive appearance. Geraniums, verbenas, monthly roses, mignonette, heliotrope and many other lovely flowers bloomed there, but each month thinned them out until early December found the Brown windows alone occupied by growing things.

Mrs. Brown always firmly ignored hints that she should lend her floral pets for the decoration of the church at Christmas. Even the frankly expressed opinion of the rector's wife that she "loved her plants more than the Lord" did not move their owner. Her faith was not great enough to rely on any miraculous interposition of

CARING FOR HER FLOWERS.

Providence to supplement the notorious absentmindedness of old Hodge, the sexton, in keeping up the chapel furnace. By Easter, when the weather was mild and her plants were forced into a luxuriance of early blooming, she was more generous, and pots of daffodils and hyacinths and crocuses and snowdrops were lent to the church with a willing heart.

The Potted Plant Club.

One year she made a suggestion that every member of the congregation should plant one or more bulbs, and if they would carefully follow her directions the church would be assured of such a quantity of plants for Easter as would make its floral display a notable one. By the rector's suggestion the Potted Plant club was organized, and Mrs. Brown was elected director in chief. Every member started three plants in order that there might be an emergency stock to fall back upon.

How the Plants Were Cared For.

Among the general rules adopted were the following: No plant was to be kept in a dry, dusty atmosphere or ever stood on the floors where there was danger of drafts. The temperature for the day was to stand about 60 and at night never be allowed to fall below 40 degrees. To moisten the atmosphere a vessel filled with water was placed near enough to the fire for the hot air to evaporate some of it. Fresh air slightly warmed was admitted to the plants when they had been taken away from the window and covered. Their room was aired every day. Each plant was to receive a daily washing with a sponge dipped in warm water to which a tiny dash of spirits of ammonia had been added. They were to be watered daily with warm, not cold, water. Sometimes the plants were drenched with soot water, which served to enrich the soil. Liquid fertilizers were also put on. If a plant showed a tendency to bloom before it was needed, it was kept in the dark in a cooler atmosphere, but one above the freezing point, and taken out in time to allow it to bloom. The Easter flower display that year was unequalled in beauty and variety, and the Potted Plant club is now an institution in the community.

MURIEL LEE.

Rock Candy.

"Originally what is now known as rock candy," explained a confectioner to a reporter, "was called in the trade Gibraltar rock. Originally, also, it was the purest kind of candy, for it was crystallized sugar pure and simple. Ordinarily it is purer than many other candies. Hawthorne, in 'The House of the Seven Gables,' describing a small store, says, 'For instance, there was a glass pickle jar filled with fragments of Gibraltar rock—not, indeed, splinters of the veritable fortress, but bits of delectable candy.' Other writers of even earlier date than that speak of Gibraltar rock. It appears, however, that the Gibraltar was finally dropped, and it became known as rock candy. I have a price list issued in 1848 to the candy trade in which Gibraltar rock is the name given, though after that it is quoted as rock candy. Throughout England it is known as Gibraltar almost exclusively outside of the large cities. In the latter, as here, the Gibraltar is dropped, and it is called rock candy."

A Dismal Failure.

A young jobbing firm in New York overbought for the fall trade. Their heaviest mistake had been in a line of overcoats, which, it looked, they would have to carry over a season. Efforts to get cash for the stock were fruitless except at ruinous rates. At last the firm went to an old timer in the trade for advice.

"Well," said the man of experience, "you've got a pretty good list of customers. Just divide the coats up into lots of thirteen each. Send a batch apiece to some of your sharpest customers, but make out the bills for twelve. They'll be so tickled to get one coat for nothing that they'll take 'em all."

The scheme had been tried before the men met again. The old timer waited for his praise.

"Well, didn't they keep the coats?" he asked.

"Yes," returned the jobber sadly. "One each—the one that wasn't billed."

The Hanging Judge.

When Lord Norbury, "the hanging judge," as he was called in Ireland, was sentencing a man to death for stealing a watch, he said:

"My good fellow, you made a grasp at time and caught eternity."

Nothing seemed to please Lord Norbury more than the continual uproar in court, created by his puns.

"What is your occupation, my honest man?" he asked a witness.

"Please, your lordship, I keep a racket court."

"So do I," said the judge.

When Lord Norbury was being buried, the grave was so deep that the ropes by which the undertaker was letting down the coffin didn't reach to the bottom. The coffin was left hanging midway while somebody went for new ropes.

"Aye," cried one in the crowd, "give him rope enough; don't stint him. He was the boy that never grudged rope to a poor body."

Economy.

Economy is the science of buying a two dollar hat for $3.75 when a good one may be had for $4. It is a harmless and fascinating pursuit for those who can afford it, but a poor man has no business to fritter away his time and substance on such extravagances. Women are particularly addicted to it and often become so skillful that they are able to get through January without encroaching on their April allowance. Men who have such wives are naturally very proud of them and are willing to redouble their efforts, if necessary, in order to provide them with the means to develop the habit.—Life.

Proof of Martian Life.

That life is in Mars is founded on no assumption, but on massed evidence that is conclusive, and the reader should realize that opposition to the idea that we now have proof of life on Mars is not based on reason, but on emotion, however speciously cloaked. All scientific objections have been met and shown untenable as to temperature, snow, etc., but human prejudice, as with the Copernican system or the origin of species, time alone can dispel.—Professor Lowell in Century.

Guessing at It.

"Let's see," said "Dubley" "what's the rest of that old saying, don't you know, that begius, 'Man proposes and'—"
"Why," replied Mugley, "it's 'Man proposes and the breach of promise suit exposes,' isn't it?"—Philadelphia Press.

Inside Information.

"I knew I would."
"But how did you know? I scarcely knew her when I made the bet."
"She told me."—Houston Post.

Quite Easy.
