Mikkalo Bros, will finish ploughing this week on their ranch above town.

Frank Lewis was in town Tuesday evening.

While the stage was on the way from Olex to Mikkalo last Monday, one of the horses became sick, so the only way the passengers had to catch the train was to walk to Mikkalo, which was about three miles—and they walked. Just what you need "Grant" to reduce your weight.

R. A. Titus was in town Monday.

E. J. Clough was here on business the first.

Claude Randall made a business trip to Arlington Monday.

John Weinert was in town Wednesday on business.

Card of Thanks.
We desire to thank our many friends and neighbors for their kind assistance in the accident and death of our beloved baby.
Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Townley.

West African Betrothals.

In some parts of west Africa the girls have long engagements. On the day of their birth they are betrothed to a baby boy a trifle older than themselves, and at the age of twenty they are married. The girls know of no other way of getting a husband, and so they are quite happy and satisfied. As wives they are patterns of obedience, and the marriages usually turn out successes.

Wasted Irony.

"How much money did you have in the purse you lost?" inquired a callow barrister of the prosecutrix in a larceny case reported in the London Telegraph.

"Four shillings, two sixpences and a sovereign in gold."

"Did you ever see a sovereign in anything but gold?"

"Yes, I once saw King Edward in a carriage."

Boring Holes in Glass.

Here is the plan pursued by an optician when he wishes to bore holes in glass. A drill borer heated to a white heat is dipped into quicksilver, whereby it is excellently hardened and sharpened by grinding on a whetstone. If the drill thus prepared is moistened with a saturated solution of camphor and oil of turpentine and the bore hole is kept rather moist, glass may be drilled like wood.—Exchange.

Getting Back.

"No, Mr. Winterbottom," said Maude Daryl coldly, "I can never bring myself to marry a man who carries a horseshoe for luck."

"And yet," George Winterbottom muttered, "who can doubt the iron's efficacy after this?"

Chuckling convulsively, the young man passed out into the cold, sad autumn night.—Exchange.

Resemblance.

At the close of their usual dinner time argument Mr. Johnson looked at his wife admiringly. "My dear," he said, "your mind resembles very much the wireless telegraph apparatus which they use in the navy."

"Yes?" she asked, flattered. "You mean because it catches subtle flashes from the surrounding ether?"

"No, my dear. Because it is often completely at sea."—Exchange.

His Illustrious Ancestor.

Mrs. Parvenu (patronizingly)—Were any of your ancestors men of note?
Mr. Flippan—Yes, madam, I should say so! One of them was the most famous admiral of his day and commanded the allied forces of the world.
Mrs. Parvenu (with altered tone of deep respect)—Is it possible, Mr. Flippan? And what was his name?
Mr. Flippan—Noah, madam.

Timing the Chauffeurs.

"You will never break up automobile speeding by timing the automobiles," bantered the stranger in the goggles.

"Maybe not, neighbor," drawled the rural constable with the huge star, "but we have broken up a lot of speeding by timing the chauffeurs."

"Timing the chauffeurs?"

"Yes, giving them sixty days' time in the county jail."—Kansas City Independent.

A Tough Game.

Jack—Say, Bill, we've been in hard luck lately, ain't we?

Bill—We have, old man.

Jack—I'll tell you what we'll do. You insure your life in my favor for $10,000, and I'll do the same for you.

Bill—Well, what good'll that do us?

Jack—Why, we'll just load up our guns and step off thirty paces somewhere and see who gets the money.—Life.

Working His Passage.

It was when there were packet boats on the Erie canal. An Irishman offered to work his passage to Buffalo, and they set him leading the horses that towed the boat. He worked faithfully for two days, doing a great deal of thinking. On the third day he thought it out. "By the powers," he said, "I might as well walk as work my passage." And walk he did, without even thanking his employers.

Assembly of Wise Men.

The witenagemot, or assembly of wise men, out of which the British parliament grew, was brought over to England by the Anglo-Saxons from their old home in Germany. Such council was originally held in each of the kingdoms of the heptarchy, but after the union of the kingdoms in a single nation under Edgar about 960 the witenagemot became the deliberative and legislative body of the nation.

Ways of William Penn.

Simon Ford recently said at a banquet in the course of a eulogy on William Penn:

"Penn was a man of peace and always got the biggest one. He believed in doing right by the Indians, and when he did them he did them right."

"The Puritans extinguished the Indian title by the simple expedient of extinguishing the Indian, but the pious Penn, instead of shooting them, got them half shot and accomplished the same result; hence the saying, 'Penn is mightier than the sword.'"—New York Press.

A Costly Hat.

Women's hats are both common and costly, as a rule, but a woman in Brunswick who made no great pretensions to fashion holds the record for the highest price paid for an article of millinery. She bought a hat with a lottery ticket which the merchant accepted in place of the money. A few weeks later the ticket drew the great prize of $15,000, and, though the woman's husband tried to induce the merchant to share the results, he only received $25. That hat cost $14,975.—London Standard.
