Have you had orders to connect your premises with the Main St. Sewer? If so you will need some good sewer pipe and fittings. These you will be able to get for less money of Hunt The Hardware Man than of any one else in Condon. We understand that Messrs Charles and Clarke who are now in the East attending to the flotation of the bonds for the new electric road have reported most favorably. During the first of the week Dr. Homer I. Keeney of Portland wired the local officers that that the contract had been let for the first 42 miles or from Condon to the John Day River. According to to these reports it is probable that construction work will be started within a short time. The surveyors are now at work at Burnt Ranch on the John Day River.

In writing to the Globe Mr. Hanna says that he is enjoying a good business and perfectly contented in his new location but he wishes the Globe be sent to him "to keep him posted on what the Wheat City is doing." That he has still a warm spot in his heart for Gilliam may be seen as he finished his letter by, "Wishing the Globe prosperity and that the Wheat City may always keep growing."

Joe Nitschke has all the idle urchins in the neighborhood out looking for wild goose eggs. He says the present crop of wild geese are just a little too wild. that they are in too great a hurry and show no disposition to slow up when he is trying to get a shot. It is the intention of Mr. Nitschke to plant the eggs next spring and start a goose ranch. He will clip the wings of the tame wild geese and allow amateur sportsmen from Condon and The Dalles, who can't hit a balloon at twenty paces, to bang away at the domesticated web-footers at so much per shot. He figures that it will amuse the hunters without injuring the birds and add many ducats to his stock of worldly wealth. He is only paying half price for china nest eggs this week.—Arlington Record.

Why don't you use less fuel?

The reason you use so much coal and wood is because you actually get get only about one-half of the heat that is generated, The other half escapes up the chimney. Why not save this waste by using a HOWARD HEATER? We can prove to you that this stove is a genuine fuel and money saver and will give you heating comfort and service which is impossible for any other stove to do. We do not want you to spend a cent for one of these stoves until you are convinced. But in your own interest if you are anxious to save money and seek relief from stove troubles, give us a chance to convince you.

THE HEAD HUNTERS.

Uncanny Trophies That Are Cherished by the Dyaks.

The head hunting propensities of the Dyaks are well known to the students of ethnology. The leading thought in the taking of heads is the idea that the conqueror could secure the "soul" of the conquered and add it to his own, increasing thereby his courage and strength and consequently his reputation as a hero as long as the head of the victim remained in his possession. It is therefore the custom of the people after battle to wrap the severed heads in a loose crate of rattan and smoke them over a fire of damp wood and leaves. Then they hang the ghastly trophies in the houses in bundles having an uncanny resemblance to gigantic clusters of grapes, each head forming a berry. These war trophies are considered by the Dyaks their most sacred possessions and are guarded with the utmost jealousy and vigilance. Their loss would mean not only a considerable decrease of personal prestige, but also the loss of a part of the "soul"—that is, of courage and strength.

I have often had the questionable privilege of sitting under the bundles of heads in the Dyak houses as the seat of honor and of examining them closely. Anakoda Unsang, who claimed to be my friend, was not a talkative man, but when roused from his usual stolidity would relate the circumstances of many a battle and victory in the past with apparent gusto, not unwilling to declare his courage and reputed invulnerability.—H. L. E. Luering in London Christian.

BITS OF MEANNESS.

Queer Traits Shown by some of the Operatic Stars.

The celebrated impresario Schurmann said it was a precarious matter to draw up an agreement with a star, for each one had some strange little provisos which he insisted on inserting. In one contract Tamagno exacted that he should be allowed thirty-seven candles each night in his dressing room. Schurmann was amazed that even a great tenor should require so much illumination, but he consented. When Schurmann visited Tamagno's dressing room he found only two candles alight. On another occasion he discovered only one. Inquiries led to the discovery that the provident tenor saved up the other candles and sold them at a profit.

Schurmann said that a small boy whose father was a great friend of Caruso's, having asked the tenor for a signed photograph, received as a reply, "Certainly; go to my photographer; he will sell you a photograph, and if you bring that to me I will write on it whatever you like."

A great feminine star made a stipulation that all her baggage be carried at the company's expense, duty free. Somewhat to the surprise of the impresario, the lady, whose wardrobe was not extensive, carried about with her a great number of enormous, heavy boxes. These were afterward discovered to contain rice, which is very cheap in Italy and which was sold at a profit in protectionist France.

There were rumors of graft in hades.

"This road," declared one faction, "was to be paved with good intentions."

"Well?"

"Examine the material. Are these good intentions?"—Kansas City Journal.
