President Taft's message dealing with the problem of conserving the natural resources of the country is a clear and practical statement. It is squarely in line with the ideas advanced by Mr. Roosevelt and meets the demands for legislation made by Secretary Ballinger and Mr. Pinchot. If the recommendations of the President are enacted into law, a great step forward will be taken to protect the interests of the people, the forests, coal lands, water power sites and other national resources, which, under existing law, are in danger of slipping from government control into private hands. In his handling of the conservation question Mr. Taft has given added evidence that he is no mere theorist. The keynote of his message was contained in an introductory paragraph in which he said: "The problem is how to save and how to utilize, how to conserve and still develop; for no sane person can contend that it is for the common good that Nature's blessings are only for unborn generations." With this as his text, Mr. Taft takes up each of the problems and suggests methods for their solution. His recommendation that Congress shall proceed at once to deal with the conservation question and shall not lose valuable time by awaiting the outcome of the controversy between the Secretary of the Interior and former Chief Forester is most timely. The Ballinger-Pinchot controversy should not be permitted to obscure the fact that important legislation is necessary fully to protect the public domain of the country from spoliation. Present laws are admittedly inadequate and reform legislation can be enacted without awaiting a finding as to whether Mr. Pinchot ought to be reinstated or Mr. Ballinger dismissed.

If there was ever any doubt as to the motives back of the assembly plan there can be none now. The interviews with the republican "leaders" that have been appearing in the Oregonian show conclusively the designs of the assemblyites. The "leaders" hate the direct primary law and they want to annul it. Through the introduction of the assembly system the politicians want to revive the old convention system though leaving Oregon nominally a direct primary state.

It is easy to understand why professional politicians do not like the primary law. Through the operations of the law the old political rings have been unbroken. The bosses have lost their prestige and ward heelers and other ring workers have lost their pull. All men are equal under the primary law. When men seek office they must run upon their merits, they cannot "fix things" with a county or a state boss. Under the primary law the "old school" politician is a discredited being.

Now the question is, do the people of Gilliam county and of Oregon want to return to the "old school"? Do they want to revive bossism with all its abuses? Do they want to have political races "fixed" before they are started or do they want individuals to seek office strictly upon their merits? Do they want government by a few men who have selfish interests to promote, or government by many men who seek merely to promote the public welfare?

If you want to go back to the "old school" of politics then you may well favor the assembly scheme. But if you like the "new deal" then get ready to fight the assembly candidates. The assembly scheme was devised for the purpose of undoing the direct primary law.

Livestock men of the Northwest will meet at the Commercial Club rooms at Portland on Jan. 27, when dates for the various fairs and racing meets in the Pacific Northwest for the coming season will be determined. The meeting will be a joint one under the auspices of the North Pacific Fair Association and the Oregon Pure Breed Livestock Association. The meeting will conclude with a banquet at night.

The editor of the Globe is in receipt this week of the "REMONSTRANCE" published by the Massachusetts Association Opposed to the Further Extension of Suffrage to Women. Its view to the situation in Oregon is as follows:

"The issue presented in the suffrage amendment to the state constitution, which is to be submitted to the voters of Oregon at the election next Nov. is entirely new in American politics.

For the first time in our history, the electorate of an American state is asked to give its sanction to the principle that the exercise of the suffrage shall be conditioned solely on the ownership of property. The proposal is that the rich man's wife, the rich man's daughter, shall be given the right to vote at all elections, while the ballot is refused to wage-earning woman, to school teachers, to all women who have no property standing their names, no matter what may be their character, or their intelligence, or their public spirit.

It is safe to assume that this proposal never would have been sanctioned by the Oregon legislature. It comes before the voters under the referendum which permits any proposition to be submitted, however crude or undemocratic it may be, which obtains the required number of signatures.

The suffragists themselves recognize the injustice of the proposal. They make no secret of their strategy. They describe their proceeding as the "one-step-at-a-time" policy. They propose first to perpetrate an injustice, and then to make the injustice the pretext for demanding the full suffrage for all women.

The conservative voters of Oregon, who have repeatedly defeated full suffrage amendments, and that by increasing majorities, have a twofold obligation resting upon them to give a short shift to the pending amendment. They should vote against it, because, on its face and in its immediate effect, it is undemocratic and un-American. And they should also vote against it because it is admittedly a subterfuge, intended to open the way to full suffrage for all women, a proposal upon which the voters of Oregon have already expressed their views in no doubtful terms.

Fielder Jones, the well known White Sox star of the American League will coach the O. A. C.

base ball team during the coming season. This announcement has caused great excitement among the students. It will mean a big year in base ball for O. A. C.
