RAISING OF POULTRY

Dr. L. L. Taylor will publish each week a few helpful hints to poultry raisers.

Feeding the young chickens—When a chicken is newly hatched it should be allowed to dry off in the brooder or incubator which has been heated to 100 degrees or under the hen as the case might be. Do not feed until they are 48 or 60 hours old and then give a little of some boiled egg; following this they should have placed before them in a shallow pan some dry mash. The Kansas experiment station recommends the following: Two pounds each of corn meal, shorts, bran, and beef scraps and 1/2 pound of charcoal. This mash should be kept before them until they have obtained a good growth. Another Kansas formula is two pounds of sifted corn chop or cracked corn, cracked kaffir corn, cracked wheat, and one pound millet. Keep fresh clean water and clean grit before them at all times.

Rudd's method of feeding—Rudd advises feeding chickens for the first two weeks on crumbled johnnycake or waste bread and granulated oats dry, keeping green food and powdered charcoal always before them. After three weeks he begins to give moist food such as stale bread soaked in sweet milk thickened with corn meal, the latter making up about one half of the whole feed. After four weeks he discontinues the granulated oats and recommends plenty of cracked wheat or corn always before them until they are large enough to eat whole grain.

BOYER'S METHOD for the first week give rolled oat meal fed in troughs, alternating with stale bread crumbled, with boiled milk to drink. After the first week feed on mash composed of two parts bran one part corn meal or one part ground wheat may be added. To a pan full of mash which should be mixed stiff so that it shall crumble, he recommends adding a handful of meat chops, after two week he recommends the addition of cracked wheat.

Grit shell and powdered charcoal should always be kept before the chicken and feed plenty of green tops or if these can not be had give baked potatoes cut in two in the center.

John Madden, the Lone Rock pioneer, was in this city a few days during the first of the week.

Women Appreciate the Brilliant Tungsten Lamp

because it affords them infinitely better light for making their toilet than the ordinary carbon incandescent. Its metal filament radiates two and a half times as much light with the same amount of current. And the quality of it is much better. Its brilliancy is maintained without deterioration during the entire life of the lamp.

Every woman should try one in her own house. It costs but a few cents and will save her money. Ask us to show you the new GE 40-watt lamp.
