This edition of the Globe has been printed in our new offices in the Condon National Bank Bldg. Moving a printshop is no small job and consequently our news columns have suffered a considerable loss of reading matter, which fact we hope our subscribers will overlook in the expectation of more and better reading matter in the future. In the past we have been burdened with a lack of room for our office, presses, type, etc., but in our present quarters we have plenty of each and are also nearer the business district with a better chance to pick up the news, and we intend taking advantage of all the opportunities knocking at our door offering us the chance to give the people of Condon and Gilliam County the best newspaper they ever knew.

Hit It Right.

Kegan Paul in his reminiscences speaks in one case of his bishop as "an astute and insincere man," giving this instance of his insincerity: At a meeting of the clergy at Clapham his chaplain told him that old Dr. Blank, who had been many years in the diocese, was vexed at having been forgotten. "Yes," said the bishop, "I have not the smallest recollection of him, but I will make it all right and will go and speak to him. Which is he?" He was pointed out, and the bishop made his way to him. "My dear Dr. Blank, I have not had a moment for real conversation with you. I need not ask you how you are after all these years. Do you still ride your gray mare?" "Yes, my lord. How good of you to remember her!" etc. The chaplain, who was within earshot, said when he again came near the bishop, "Then you did remember Dr. Blank after all?" "Not a bit of it," said the bishop. "I saw the gray hairs on his coat, and I chanced the sex."

Leeds Pottery.

Leeds is probably the most cosmopolitan center of industry in all England, that of pottery being the most ancient. This industry rose to some eminence at one period, both in regard to domestic and ornamental ware of the white filigree order, but now the only branch which remains is that of artistic majolica, in which we find real works of art in the choicest of designs and coloring. Such productions, worthy of special note, are the flower vases and pedestals for the same, small vases and other ornaments, and it is doubtful if either the Moors, who founded this industry, or the Italians, who developed it, produced anything superior to the modern pottery from Leeds.—Consular Reports.

Ready Example.

The school managers were present—all of 'em—and the teacher was anxious that her scholars should do well. She picked upon Tommy as the most likely to do her credit. Tommy's knees showed through his trousers, and because the managers were present Tommy sat with a hand on each knee.

"Tommy," said the teacher, "will you please give me"—the teacher was always polite when the managers were present—"will you please give me a sentence with the word 'toward' in it?"

Then Tommy rose and in a graceful attitude, with a thumb on each knee, answered:

"Please, teacher, I toward my trowsis."—London Answers.

Cleverer Than He.

The confirmed bachelor came back to the club lunch from the end of the earth, and we all asked him if he was married (he is nearly fifty). "I shall marry a clever woman if I do," he replied grimly. "Thought you didn't like those clever women," said the youngest member simply. "I don't," said the bachelor, whose views are well known and widely spread. "But if ever I marry it'll be an infernally clever woman who does it."—London Chronicle.

LIFE OF A WATCH.

Depends Largely on the Timekeeper and the Man Wearing It.

The life of a watch, jewelers say, depends largely on the person carrying it and the care taken of it. As to the care of a watch some jewelers say that it should be oiled once a year, some once in two years; perhaps, once in eighteen months would be about the right thing.

All jewelers say that a watch should always be wound at the same time daily. This is essential to make it give the best and most uniform results. If a watch is permitted to run down it may on rewinding keep different time and require regulating. With the watch wound regularly and kept running there is set up and established in the mainspring a certain tension. If this strain is wholly released by letting the watch run down the spring may on rewinding take on a somewhat different tension. This difference may be extremely slight, but it may be enough to affect the running of the watch.

While some watches are long lived, many are short lived, the long lived watches being of course those of fine quality that are also well cared for. But there is a limit to the life of any watch that is kept constantly in use. The best of watches, like the best of anything, will wear out in time.

A watchmaker had lately brought in to him for repair a watch 125 years old that had been running practically continuously. It might be difficult to say of just what duration its intervals of rest had been, but it was supposed to have been run practically continuously, and, though it had stopped at least once, it was still in fairly good condition and good for some future use. But this was an extraordinary case. Most watches, however excellent they may have been originally, would with constant use wear out in far less time.

Sometimes there are brought in to jewelers fine old and once valuable watches whose owners, desiring now to buy a new watch, wish to offer the old watch at some price in exchange, but it is of no value except for the weight of the metal contained in its cases. Every jeweler has an accumulative collection of such old works, which are of no value whatever, except that at long intervals there may be found among them a wheel or a part that may serve in some other old time watch brought in for repair.

So watches do wear out, and as to the life of a watch, a jeweler said, a good average watch with fair care ought to wear from thirty to forty years and a fine watch fifty years; it might last seventy-five, but fifty years would probably be nearer the figure.

It may be thought that a superior watch would last longer than that, but really the wonder is that this delicate piece of mechanism running year after year ceaselessly should run so long.—New York Sun.

A Matter of Opinion.

"Mary!"

Father's voice rolled down the stairs and into the dim and silent parlor.

"Yes, papa, dear!"

"Ask that young man if he has the time."

A moment of silence.

"Yes; George has his watch with him."

"Then ask him what is the time."

"He says it is 11:48, papa."

"Then ask him if he doesn't think it about bedtime."

Another moment of silence.

"He says, papa," the silvery voice announced impersonally—"he says that he rarely goes to bed before 1, but it seems to him that it is a matter of personal preference merely and that if he were in your place he would go now if he felt sleepy."—Harper's Bazar.

Fruitful Florida.

Of the states east of the Mississippi, Florida is second in area by only a very small margin, being over 59,000 square miles in extent. She has over 1,500 miles of sea coast, embracing what is probably the most wonderful system of land-locked harbors in the world. Her whole surface is dotted with wide rivers and broad lakes, guaranteeing her, in conjunction with a network of state canals, cheap transportation for all time to come. Her soil can produce practically every known fruit of the earth, most of it in abundance.—National Magazine.

Cautious.

A member of the faculty of a New England university tells of a freshman who was asked by one of the professors whether he had proved a certain proposition in Euclid. "Well, sir," responded the freshman, "'proved' is a strong word. But I will say that I have rendered it highly probable."
