PAVING BID OF ROXALL CO. IS ACCEPTED BY COUNCIL

Amendment Referred to the Voters to Authorize Paving and Other Street Improvements-- Election June 13

At the council meeting Monday night it was decided to accept the bid of the Roxall Construction Co. on the paving and to award the contract to them. This was done only after the Roxall Co. had agreed to guarantee their material and work for five years. The report of the water committee was accepted and the contract to furnish the material for the dam at the city farm was given to the Arlington Lumber Co.

On Tuesday night the council again met to read the bill for a proposed amendment to Chapter 6 of city charter. This is a bill authorizing the having and other street improvement and is to be submitted to the vote of the people at a special election to be held June 13. Following is the entire bill, published here for the benefit of the voters, who will pass upon it.

It seems there is some misunderstanding, with some of the people about the raise in our meats, which we wish to correct. We have raised some cuts 2 to 2 1/2 cents per lb. and some of the cheaper cuts we haven't raised at all. FARR BROS.

MONSTER THREE DAYS CELEBRATION PLANNED FOR THE WHEAT CITY

Condon is making preparations for a grand three-day Fourth of July celebration. $500 have been raised and this in addition to the gate receipts is sufficient to insure a successful celebration. Efforts are being made to secure an aviator to make one flight each day. It is probable that the Knights of Columbus ball team will be here from Portland to play the local team. There will be the usual minor sports and a big dance each night. Mayor Burns is in charge and this goes far toward insuring a successful celebration.

Gilliam Taxpayers Ask Why the Burglar Alarm Failed to Register on Post and Bridge Deals

The two-part novelette published in the last issue of the Times over the name of H. A. Thiessen is quite creditable as a "first attempt." However the honorable judge overlooked a few things which are important parts in his scenario. Even so, it is really a much better literary effort than we had expected.

We pass over his introduction without criticism, it being a fairly good imitation of hot air, and, going to Part One of the story proper, we will say that the first is true as far as the author went but, as we said before, he left out two-thirds of the important facts. As this will be up for the decision of the court next week we will say no more about it until that decision is made when it will be thoroughly explained. We will say here, however, that the judge knows no more about the cost of producing printed material than we do about the most difficult bit of surgery, hence his inability to pass upon printing bills with any degree of fairness. He next erred in saying that the case now up had been once thrown out of court. It was not. It was withdrawn on account of improper service. The next sentence in the budding literary genius, referring to "blow that killed father," is where the human interest element, so necessary to a successful story, is brought into play.

In referring to the appointment of the official paper the first of this year, the judge says that "the Globe refused to swear that its list was genuine and that the Times had a sworn statement in accordance with the requirements of law." [This is one of the deepest parts of the author's plot.] The law does not require the publisher of a newspaper, asking the appointment as official paper to file a sworn statement of circulation when application is made. Rather the law says that in case of a contest for the appointment the court shall notify the applicants and set a day on or before which sworn statements shall be filed. This the court failed to do but appointed the Times without further notification to the Globe. One could hardly expect anything else, however, after the Globe had, by reviewing the court, assailed the dignity of the judge. Thiessen then rambles on to the effect that the Times agreed to publish the tax lists for ten cents per square while the Globe had charged fifty cents. The Times has published the lists at 10c per square but it does not follow that it is a fair rate by any means. A farmer may plow another's field for 10c per acre but that does not mean that other farmers must be as foolish.

In Part Two, regarding the lining of the jail, the judge gets behind the grand jury. It makes no difference to the Globe how many times this was recommended, it still remains in our view a needless expenditure of the taxpayers' money. Now while the judge, who has chosen to style himself as a burglar alarm, is still in the literary mood we would ask him where the burglar alarm was when the Interior Warehouse Co., of which he is local manager, received a county warrant for $800 for posts? Where has this same alarm been during the last six months when $30,000 of the taxpayer's money have been expended on roads? Where was this same alarm when the contract was given to one man to erect a county bridge across the John Day without asking for competitive bids? Where was the alarm when a county warrant was drawn several weeks ago to pay for this bridge when there isn't a stick of timber on the ground as yet? There have been false alarms. Even vaunted burglar alarms, advertised as effective, have been known to fail miserably at certain times.

It was also decided at the meeting to petition the county court to appropriate $2000 in addition to the $600 appropriated by the state. Other arrangements are being made. 991 PIGS RAISED ON THE GILMAN-FRENCH RANCHES THIS SPRING

J. T. Cooper, manager of the Gilman-French ranches, says that on the four ranches 991 pigs have been raised this spring. It is probable that this number will be swelled by at least 400 more before the end of the season. Part of these are full blooded Durocs and Mr. Cooper says that this is the best strain for this country.
