

Ecola Seafood closed by blaze

EO Media Group

Ecola Seafood in Cannon Beach was damaged by a fire early Saturday, July 21.

Firefighters received a report of smoke at the Spruce Street restaurant at 2:45 a.m. and were able to quickly knock down the fire.

The restaurant had fire, smoke and water damage, with most of the damage on the first floor, according to Cannon Beach Fire Chief Matt Benedict.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

The restaurant is closed.

Trash cans catch fire near local business

The cause is undetermined

Cannon Beach firefighters responded to large trash can fire by Sweet Basil's Cafe Sunday morning.

A neighbor heard popping sounds at the business on Hemlock Street at around 2:45 a.m. The neighbor called 911, Fire Chief Matt Benedict said, but knocked out the fire with a garden hose.

The fire appears to be accidental, but the cause is undetermined, Benedict said.

The two trash cans and the structure enclosing them were completely destroyed. There was heat damage to a nearby vehicle and the pots on the restaurant's porch, but otherwise no damage to the building, Benedict said.
