TILLAMOOK COUNTY FAIR

One of the tramp Editors of the Courier visited the fair on Thursday and was impressed with many things that he saw, the management was well organized, every man was his post of duty the people of the county had taken lively interest in the fair, and when the writer was told this was only the second annual effort to have a county fair it seemed all more wonderful. The buildings and general arrangements were good for so young an organization. The fair grounds consist of five acres admirably located near the railroad depot and is well fenced. The main exhibit building 50 x 100 was well filled with exhibits that the county may well be proud of. The band stand substantially covered was occupied by the county booster band comprising 60 pieces and directed by C. W. Trombley. The buildings for the cattle were not what future years will provide but for the first year of the present occupation was very good as was the cattle exhibited. We are not taking the time to go into detail relative to the cattle exhibit, suffice to say that Tillamook county need not be ashamed of the class of cattle that was exhibited at the fair this year, the poultry house was well filled with various fancy breeds of poultry of all kinds which did credit to the exhibitors. The exhibit of baked goods gave evidence that the wives of the county the mother and daughters of our homes are responsible for the broad smiles of the men, in that they are good cooks. The weather was unfavorable, but everybody was happy a peculiar faculty of Tillamookers this could not be foretold by the management—the fair board have done their best to make the second annual Tillamook County fair a success and in spite of weather conditions have succeeded and the people of the county appreciate their efforts and the coming years will demonstrate the purpose of the people of Tillamook County to make the annually occurring county fair a success

NO FAVORITISM

The position taken by President Wilson regarding the report submitted by the Belgian commission in relation to the atrocities which the Belgians claim was committed by German troops, is undoubtedly correct. This country cannot with justice toward all, and to maintain its strict neutrality, take sides with any of the warring nations. It must remain a mere spectator of the crime across the sea, lest it arouse a lasting hatred with any country against which any partiality may be shown.

At the close of the war there will have to be an accounting made of all irregularities of the ethics of war and a balance will be struck.
