Sam Bauer, the Best Ever.

A trio of jolly, good natured people dropped into the Courier office Wednesday afternoon just to shake hands with the editor and get acquainted. They were Ed. H. Schloss, of the Oregon Journal, and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Barrett, of Portland. They had been spending the past two weeks in the hills near Neskowin and from the good, healthy color in their faces and the two weeks' growth of whiskers on the faces of Messrs. Schloth and Barrett one look was enough to satisfy any person that they had been having the time of their lives. living as close to nature as their host, Sam Bauers, would permit them. They had a wealth of good things to tell about Sam's hospitality, and say they were never better entertained in all their lives. This was their first trip into the Nestucca Valley, but they say it is not going to be the last one by any means.

All Stores Now Under One Head.

Better Baby Contest.

The baby contest held at the Grange Hall yesterday was very successful. Mrs. L. M. Kraner was in charge of the work in the south end of the county and has been indefatigable in her efforts in getting all of the babies in line, knowing full well that the old Nestucca Valley produces the best of everything. Mrs. Dunstan, Mrs. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Hoy, Dr. McGee, Mrs. Callahan, of Tillamook, and Dr. Shearer, of this city, were the able corps of workers that took charge of the affair yesterday. Twenty one babies were in the contest but owing to the fact that the score cards have to be sent to Portland the result cannot be published this week. Quite a number whose names were entered failed to come. It was probably due to the "squally" weather.

NESKOWIN

Neskowin is getting to be quite an interesting place since so many campers have come in. Twelve loads arrived in one day this week.

There were services at the Neskowin school house Sunday, Elder R. Y. Blalock preached. A revival meeting will be held at Neskowin some time next month.
